House Cuts European Arms Aid by Half

Secret Testimony Discloses Maragon Use of U. S. Plane; Gen. Vaughan Contradicted

Perfume Importer Flown to Paris in 1945, Witness Says; Gift Accounts Differ

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

A torrent of hitherto secret testimony, which reveals how John Maragon arranged for himself and two others to fly to Paris on an Army plane on perfume business in July, 1945, was released late yesterday.

It showed Senator Mundt (R., S. D.) suggesting that it was Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, White House military aide, who "greased the skids" for the trip. He said it had to be somebody with "a colossal amount of influence in high circles," considering how difficult it was for civilians to get into Paris "almost on the heels of Eisenhower."

Maragon, who claims General Vaughan as a "good friend," was working for the Albert Verley Co. of Chicago, a dealer in perfume and soap oils, at the time he and his companions got passports and flew to Europe with the Army's Air Transport Command.

Freezers Sent in June

His employer, David A. Bennett, head of Verley, gave General Vaughan deep-freeze units for himself and friends that same summer.

The freezers which Bennett ordered began going out on June 12, 1945.

Maragon and his two companions—Harry Hoffman, Verley's advertising man, and Emmett King, a New York lawyer—flew to Paris on July 17, 1945, Hoffman carrying $60,000 in cash and credit.

The secret testimony, taken down at an executive session at the Capitol Monday, was given out by the Senate subcommittee investigating 5-percenters after President Truman asked that judgment be suspended in General Vaughan's case until he has testified. At a White House press conference, Mr. Truman complained that hearings "friendly" to General Vaughan had been held behind "closed doors."

Holes Knocked in Story

Actually, the secret testimony knocked holes in General Vaughan's deep-freezer story.

Senator Hoey (D., N. C.), chairman of the Senate subcommittee that is making the investigation, explained in giving out the transcript that the purpose was to "remove any possible idea of unfairness."

In the 63 pages of testimony were flat contradictions of General Vaughan's weekend statement that he had been told that the freezers were "factory rejects" or "experimental models" and "did not have commercial market value."

Hoffman, the Milwaukee advertising man, denied that he made

Chicago Burglar Strangles Baby As Mother Faints

Chicago, Aug. 18 (AP).—Police said a Negro burglar strangled a three-day-old white baby tonight and then fled.

The infant was Susan Elizabeth Skeoch, 1105 E. 65th st.

Police Lieut. William Hennessy gave this account:

Susan's mother, Mrs. Dorothy Skeoch, 22, was in the kitchen of their two-room apartment when the man entered through the kitchen door. The baby was on a bed in the adjoining room.

Mrs. Skeoch fainted when the intruder grabbed her. When she regained consciousness, she called her neighbor, Mrs. Viol Benkus, 24. The two women found the baby dead. The infant was still lying on the bed. A plastic diaper was wrapped tightly around the baby's throat.

Thomas Skeoch, 21, the child's father, an unemployed dock worker, was not at home at the time.

Dr. Green Dies; Imperial Wizard of Georgia Klan

Atlanta, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Dr. Samuel Green, Imperial Wizard of the Associated Klans of Georgia, died at his home tonight of a heart attack.

Members of the family said there had been no indication the 59-year-old doctor was ailing. Dr. Green died shortly after 6 p. m. in his home.

He was the only member of the Klan who was unmasked at public meetings. He wore bright green robes.

All Eyes on the Potato

Federal Funds Go to Boost Spuds Output—and Surplus

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Management experts such as private industry employs would go crazy trying to put sense into the Government's potato programs.

Chief among the inconsistencies it would meet would be the Agriculture Department's efforts to reduce production on the one hand and to increase it on the other.

As the administrative office, Agriculture gets the blame for the programs. As a matter of record, however, Agriculture has appealed constantly and consistently to Congress for three years to do something about the program, or let it correct some of the abuses.

In Maine's great potato-growing county, Aroostook, one large office in Presque Isle is devoted solely to buying surplus potatoes for which no profitable commercial demand exists.

A few blocks away are two other offices, both equally well staffed and equipped, whose duty it is to educate farmers how to grow more potatoes.

In the 12 months from July 1, 1948, to June 30, 1949, the office of Carvell E. Foster, local director of the Production and Marketing Administration, cleared 57,782 separate purchasing accounts to the State PMA office at Orono.

There another large staff wrote a similar number of checks, drawn on Commodity Credit Corporation, paying out more than 67 million dollars to 4503 growers for surplus potatoes.

The Government then, to carry out the mandate of Congress, spent 25 million dollars more to give those 67 million dollars worth of tubers away.

This tremendous expenditure was incurred because there were too many spuds. But while Agriculture was so freely expending the taxpayers' money getting rid of those extra potatoes, it was

House Asked to Probe Potato Support Program

A House investigation of the Federal potato price support program was asked yesterday by Representative Thomas J. Lane (D., Mass.), who expressed astonishment at "tremendous payments" made to Maine farmers. Story on Page 12.

Officer Shift Follows Probe Of Wire Tap

Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon has been relieved of his assignment as liaison officer between the Metropolitan police, Municipal Court and the U. S. Attorney's office.

Shimon's transfer to the Fourteenth Precinct, on orders of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, followed an investigation of alleged wire-tapping activities by two high police officials, it was learned from one police source.

Shimon had been assigned since December, 1941, until about a year ago to the office of the United States Attorney as a special investigator. In this role, he worked under the United States Attorney and was not under the jurisdiction of the police high command even though he still remained on the police pay roll. Later Major Barrett named him as liaison officer at court, duties that took most of his time.

Shimon's transfer was announced by Inspector Clarence Talley, acting superintendent of police. Talley declined to comment on reasons for the transfer. Such comment would have to come from Barrett, he said.

Barrett has been vacationing at Colonial Beach, Va. It was learned yesterday that he had left Colonial Beach and returned to Washington.

He instructed his secretary, Sergt. Lewis Peters, to tell re-

Chicago Police Set House Fire For Man Wanted In Shooting

Chicago, Aug. 18 (AP).—Police beseiged a man in a west side house with tear gas and machine gun fire tonight, then set fire to the structure to smoke him out.

Ernest Craig, 28, had been trapped in the building three hours when police tossed in a magnesium flare.

The entire first floor of the building was set afire. Police attempted to enter the burning structure but were forced back by fire from Craig's gun.

"If you want me, come in and get me," screamed Craig.

Ray Crane, chief of the uniformed police, ordered the building set aflame.

Scores of police who had fought a three hour gun battle with Ernest Craig, 28,—wanted for shooting a child—surrounded the shructure when he attempted to escape by a window.

Two policemen and three women were wounded during the exchange of shots, some apparently by flying glass.

Craig barricaded himself in his home after shooting wildly at a neighbor and accidentlly wounding two-year-old Diane Atkins. She was taken to County Hospital suffering from a head wound.

Police first tried to coax Craig to surrender. Then they resorted to tear gas in an attempt to rout him, but he screamed: "If you want me, come in and get me."

Neighbors fled to their basements for shelter during the prolonged and sporadic firing.

Witnesses said when Craig emerged through the window scores of police guns opened fire and he fell writhing to the ground.

Vote 73 to 8 For Texan

Senate Confirms Tom Clark And McGrath in New Posts

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By an overwhelming 73-to-8 vote, the Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Attorney General Tom Clark as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

A few minutes later, by voice vote, the Senate unanimously approved the nomination of Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) as Attorney General to succeed Clark.

The eight votes against Clark all were cast by Republicans. The 49-year-old Texas lawyer, who campaigned vigorously for President Truman last year, will fill the vacancy caused by the death last month of Associate Justice Frank Murphy.

Opposition to Clark was led by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), who termed the appointment "transparently political."

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), red-faced and angry, bitterly assailed the Senate Judiciary Committee for its failure to call Clark before it in response to a request from Ferguson.

Taft called the procedure "utterly unjustifiable, arbitrary and outrageous," and said the refusal alone justified a vote against the confirmation.

A little later, Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) voiced the same argument. He said he believed Clark would make "an excellent judge," but he expressed his profound dissatisfaction with the committee procedure by voting against the nomination.

Senator Connally (D., Tex.),

B-36 Probe Exonerates Symington

Charge He, Odlum Intended to Set Up Combine Disproved, Chairman Says

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Los Angeles, Aug. 18.—Chairman Mel Price (D., Ill.), of the House B-36 investigating subcommittee, said today that charges that Air Force Secretary Symington and Consolidated-Vultee Chairman Floyd Odlum secretly tried to force several aircraft companies into a "huge combine" have been "completely exploded."

Price made the statement after his group spent two days quizzing topflight West Coast aircraft manufacturers. The charge was made in a speech by Representative James E. Van Zandt (R., Pa.) and the now famous anonymous document before the House Armed Services Committee.

At the same time, the investigators learned that the Air Force has made an exhaustive inquiry into the affairs of retired Air Force Col. Franklin C. Wolfe to determine whether he had influenced the award of aircraft contracts. Colonel Wolfe is the brother of Maj. Gen. K. B. Wolfe, Air Force procurement chief.

Report He Is Cleared

However, committee sources said they understood the Air Force investigation of Wolfe exonerated him of wrongdoing.

The plane makers talked frankly about merger proposals made by Odlum and others during the past two years, but said they never had heard Symington's name mentioned as the proposed head of such a "General Motors of the Air."

Robert E. Gross, president of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., testified that in 1948 Odlum was trying to sell out his Consolidated-Vultee stock. Committee members declared this did not jibe with the reports that he was trying to build a "combine."

"The testimony of these aircraft builders under oath definitely explodes the charges about a 'General Motors of the Air,'" Price told The Washington Post. "All the evidence about merger suggestions indicates they were above-board and normal business proposals and that no pressure was involved.

Symington Not Involved

"We've had no testimony which links Symington in any way with such a 'trust' and I can reach no other conclusion but that he was not involved."

Colonel Wolfe, whose Beverly Hills home has figured in the investigation, testified that he was hired by the Emerson Electric Co. of St. Louis, then headed by Secretary Symington, upon his retirement from the Air Force in November, 1944.

Wolfe testified that he served as a technical consultant to the company in his capacity as an airplane turret expert.

Emerson made turrets during the war. The colonel said he was paid $1000 a month plus expenses and received between $15,000 and $20,000 from the company in 10 or 11 months.

He also was employed by other

Finns Say Red Strikers Aim at Coup

Troops Called Out In First Outbreak Of Actual Violence; 1 Dead, 9 Injured

Helsinki, Finland, Aug. 18 (AP).—Troops were called out today after one person was killed and nine injured in the first outbreak of violence in a new Communist strike offensive. A government official said the offensive is designed to make Finland into a Communist state.

The first skirmish was in the lumbering town of Kemi, in northern Finland on the Gulf of Bothnia. Police and striking lumberjacks exchanged fire after up to 1500 strikers smashed through police lines in an effort to attack workers reporting for duty at a timber-sorting dam.

Police, struggling to disperse the surging lumberjacks with blackjacks and tear-gas bombs, fired warnings into the air, they said. The strikers retaliated with pistol fire.

Maj. Gen. Arne Blick, commanding officer of the First Finnish Infantry Regiment stationed at Oulu, 60 miles south of Kemi, said one striker was killed and nine other persons, including three policemen, were injured. The general, who took 200 soldiers in trucks to Kemi, said the situation there is "well in hand" and no more incidents are expected.

Blick said that in addition to being wounded by rubber truncheons and sabers, some strikers were injured by stones thrown by their own comrades.

The government yesterday declared the Kemi strike illegal.

Most Are Non-Reds

The outbreak there was the first violence in what the government describes as a nation-wide strike offensive, aiming "to create chaos in order to usurp power and establish a people's democracy (Communist government) in Finland."

Unto Varjonen, Minister without Portfolio who termed this the aim of the strike action, said the government intends to "inflict a crushing defeat on the Communists." Varjonen heads a cabinet board chosen to deal with strike threats.

A majority of Finland's trade union members are non-Communists and some 200,000 of the 300,000 unionists may defy the strike call. A walkout of 100,000, however, could upset seriously the nation's economic life. Virtually all unions have announced strike actions in the next eight days, and some of them struck today.

Dock Workers Out

The government newspaper Suomen Sosialidemokraati said it believed the Communists were seeking to lead Finland down the same road as that taken by Czechoslovakia. The paper added it did not think the Communists would succeed.

Bakery workers, dockers and building construction workers went on strike this morning. Tobacco workers already were out, and lumber and forestry workers were scheduled to start a walkout tonight. The dock strike was complete in most ports.

These strikes were decided on by Communist-led unions after devaluation of the Finnish mark early

The Unwed Mother

Maternity Homes Offer Aid To Girls, Not Condemnation

(Nearly every tenth child born in Washington last year was illegitimate—2628 of 27,867 births. Six years ago, one of every 14 was illegitimate. This series of articles is devoted to some of the problems of unwed motherhood, as related by local officials whose agencies deal with this growing social condition.)

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Is it better to publicize maternity homes and other social services for U. Ms.?

Or should these agencies just stand by, ready to help those U. Ms. who find them?

Against publicity, surprising as it may seem, is the fear that some persons might think agencies are "encouraging" pregnancy out of wedlock.

But outweighing this is another fear: that the women who need help may not know that these agencies exist.

Social workers are aware that women caught up in the sudden panic of pregnancy might choose abortions, abandon their newborn infants, or even commit suicide to escape public disgrace.

One thing is certain: Whenever there is any publicity about the social services open to unwed mothers, a number of applicants say they "read about" the agency.

Social workers want two things stressed in relation to maternity services:

The agency is here to help, not criticize or condemn. The girl must make her own peace with herself and society. The agency can help her figure out the practical aspects of her future, may be able to straighten out mental quirks which have blocked her from happiness.

On Three Major Points

Deadlock on Marshall Funds Is Reported by Conferees

NYHT News Service

A Senate and House conference aimed at settling differences in the $5,647,000,000 Marshall Plan appropriations bill fell flat yesterday with members reporting it as absolutely impossible to reach an agreement.

Conference members deadlocked on three major points—continuation of a congressional watchdog committee, arms plant dismantling and the amount of the bill during a closed session. The Economic Cooperation Administration, which administers the aid program, will continue to function under authorization of a stopgap resolution renewed only Wednesday.

The conference broke up with Representative Taber (R., N. Y.) asserting that "not a damned thing" had been accomplished. Senator Wherry of Nebraska, Republican floor leader, was understood, however, to feel that a compromise measure can be worked out.

Of 16 differences in the House and Senate versions of the appropriation bill, only three appeared to be giving the conferees trouble. First is the insistence of the Senate that $344,000 of the appropriation be earmarked for the ECA watchdog committee. The House has instructed its members to fight to abolish the special committee.

Next is a difference between the House and Senate on the amount of money ECA should spend during the next 12 months. The House voted for a grant for 10 and a half months of $3,568,470,000. The Senate approved a full year's allocation of $3,628,380,000.

The third hurdle is the question of dismantling war plants in western Germany for reparations. The Senate bill would instruct the ECA to seek to retain plants already scheduled for dismantling if they would help European recovery if left in Germany.

Wherry led a move in the conference to take the House appropriation figure of $3,568,470,000 and spread it over a full 12-month period. As President Truman originally asked for $4,198,200,000 for the ECA program this year, the Wherry suggestion would mean a $629,730,000 cut for Marshall Plan nations.

The conference group adjourned without setting another date for a meeting. Most Senate and House members say a meeting of minds is probable in the near future.

They Hope to Kill It

212 Representatives Favor Plan, Only 46 Oppose, Survey Shows

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Thirty-seven of New York State's 44 House members favor home rule for the District of Columbia.

Three are on record against local self-government, four are noncommittal and there is one vacancy.

Adding the New York totals to those for the eight surveys published previously by The Washington Post, the totals on home rule sentiment are:

For: 212. Against: 46. Noncommittal: 33. Not available: 1.

Adding in the 1948 voting records of House members from the two areas remaining to be checked—the border States and the South—the over-all House totals are:

For: 221.
Against: 126.
Noncommittal: 33.
Not available: 1.
Not yet polled: 56.

Thus an absolute majority of the House's present 433 members (there are two vacancies) already is on record for some form of home rule for Washington.

Here are the opinions of New York State's new House members:

L. Gary Clements (D.), former city councilman and a member of the D. C. Bar:

"I'd like to have ample opportunity to really study the issue here."

T. Vincent Quinn (D.): "I haven't given it any consideration and wouldn't want to give an opinion until I have."

James J. Delaney (D.): "I'm going to look it over very closely. I don't want to be committed at this time. I still have an open mind on it."

Louis B. Heller (D.): "Without having given it much study, I'm inclined to go along on the broad principle of home rule."

James Joseph Murphy (D.): "I haven't given it much serious thought but I believe in home rule and city inhabitants having a vote here as those in any other city do."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (D.): "As a member of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, I'm already on record for home rule. I'm confident home rule will give democratic rights to all citizens of the District of Columbia and I'm confident the District, under home rule, will realize it is the showcase

Suffrage Measure Faces Action by Full D. C. House Committee

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Opponents of District home rule may agree today to vote the suffrage issue out of the Harris Subcommittee on grounds they have the strength to "kill" it in the full House District Committee.

This possible outcome of today's 11 a. m. full committee meeting was suggested last night by a member of the Harris group which voted Tuesday to table the Senate-passed Kefauver bill for an elected city government.

The member, who asked to remain anonymous, explained that he always felt the home rule measure should be given "its day in court" before the full 25-member committee. But he expressed confidence that the even larger group would not send the bill to the House floor for final action.

"No Bottling" Pledged

District Committee Chairman McMillan (D., S. C.) has pledged that no local measures, including home rule proposals, would be bottled up in any subcommittees.

McMillan called today's extra session primarily to review the Harris Subcommittee "pigeonholing" action. Due to the confusing parliamentary maneuvering within the committee, no member would predict the outcome of today's closed meeting. Only one thing was clear: the session would undoubtedly be a hot one.

Meanwhile, Representative Klein (D., N. Y.) disclosed that the bipartisan group of committee members favoring home rule would confer on strategy just prior to the meeting.

Wants Committee Discharged

He has served notice that he will offer a motion to discharge the Harris Subcommittee from further consideration of the suffrage issue. He and Representative Auchincloss (R., N. J.), author of another pending home rule proposal, are hoping for at least 10 supporting votes.

If the motion carries to place the full committee in charge of the home rule bills, Klein said he then would immediately move that the committee vote to send the Kefauver measure to the House floor.

He explained that if the District Committee upholds the Harris Subcommittee, the way would be paved for a petition to discharge the committee from any further consideration of the question, and thus bring it before the House.

Directors Pick Fleming

Naval Observatory Selected As Site for Hospital Center

The Naval Observatory grounds were definitely selected yesterday as the site for the 23-million-dollar Washington Hospital Center.

The location was picked at the first meeting of a corporation of the center's board of directors, which also chose Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, as president of the corporation.

Mrs. Millard E. Tydings, wife of the Maryland Senator, who led the fight in Congress for the center, was elected vice president.

The project, when completed, "will make Washington the foremost hospital center in the world," General Fleming said in a statement last night.

He estimated that it will require between a year and a half and two years for the Naval Observatory to move from the present 70-acre grounds at 34th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw. to its proposed new site near Charlottesville Va.—provided Congress approves legislation now before it authorizing such a move.

Construction cannot begin, he said, until the observatory is entirely moved from the present grounds, since building operations would "cloud the skies" and thus interfere with the observatory's work.

But once construction is started, he estimated, it will take about two years to complete the center.

Present plans, said General Fleming, call for a seven-story main structure of 1000 beds. It will contain all the best features

President's Plan Slashed By 209-151 On Roll Call

(Roll Call on Page 21)

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

A chopped-down version of the Administration's foreign arms-aid program was voted by the House last night—$580,495,000 short of the requested $1,450,000,000.

Ignoring Democratic leaders' pleas that $1,160,990,000 earmarked for western European members of the North Atlantic Treaty was a "minimum" figure, the House cut that amount in half.

On final passage, the vote was 238 to 122.

The key roll call vote showing the temper of the House on slashing the weapons outlay gave a far greater proportionate lineup against the Administration's views, however, with 209 voting to cut the European arms funds, and 151 opposed.

71 Democrats for Slash

In that slash, sponsored by Representative Richards (D., S. C.), second ranking Democrat on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, 71 Democrats joined 137 Republicans and American-Laborite Marcantonio, while 143 Democrats and eight Republicans opposed the reduction.

As drafted, the bill would have spread the western European funds over a two-year period. Richards convinced the House majority that the European nations should be met "halfway" and the program limited to June 30, 1950, when Congress can review it.

The cut was regarded as the most significant revision of proposed foreign policy legislation since the war.

Senate opponents of the full arms outlay viewed it as a major boost to their own economy drive when the bill reaches that chamber.

In heated all-day debate on the measure, House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Kee (D., W. Va.) led the fight, terming the bill the only practical way to check the threat of Russian aggression.

Opponents variously attacked the plan as "a declaration of war," the "start of a catastrophic arms race," and "a fear . . . artificially engendered to continue a war economy (and) . . . keep the Administration in power."

869 Millions Provided

As approved by the House, the bill to initiate aid to friendly nations to help them withstand communism authorizes $869,505,000.

Western Europe would receive $580,495,000 and no change was made in funds requested for other countries: $211,370,000 for Greece and Turkey, and a total of $27,640,000 for Iran, Korea and the Philippines.

Cash would have to be appropriated later, although up to 125 million dollars to begin the program could be advanced by the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

The Richards amendment was championed with equal vigor by Representative Vorys (R., Ohio), also a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Democratic leaders who had forecast approval of the full bill tried in vain to upset the bipartisan opposition.

First approved tentatively on a standing division vote of 182 to 142, the Richards amendment then passed on a teller vote of 172 to 137. While Administration leaders hoped the conclusive roll call vote would favor them, it was even more one-sided.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, who rarely makes addresses in the House, was powerless to change the tide, though he pleaded that the membership was listening to the same "wait a while" talk heard before the outbreak of World War II.

Technically, the Richards amend-

New Method Refuels Jets in 90 Seconds

New York, Aug. 18 (NYHT).—A new technique allowing jet fighter planes to take on 600 gallons of fuel in 90 seconds during flight was announced here today by Sir Alan Cobham, pioneer British pilot and aeronautical engineer.

Sir Alan, whose earlier flight-refueling system made possible the nonstop round-the-world flight of an Air Force B-50 bomber earlier this week, predicted the new method would enable jet fighters to operate habitually at long range. This would revolutionize air strategy by making possible long range jet fighter escort of bombers.

A British meteor jet fighter with a normal endurance of less than an hour already has been kept aloft more than 12 hours, according to Sir Alan.

Sir Alan said the new system would permit three jet fighters to be refuelled simultaneously" "with absolute ease and safety" by a single huge tanker plane which could refuel 30 fighters before landing.

Modified versions intended for commercial transports will be made available by an American company, Flight Refueling Inc., of Danbury, Conn., he added.

Sir Alan said representatives of Soviet Russia had made repeated inquiries but had been refused information.

The tanker plane reels out a specially-equipped fuel line from its tail, with a funnel-shaped metal cone fitted on. The jet fighter picks up the tanker with radar, flies a probe-shaped fuel intake into the funnel and makes a fueling connection.

The fuel line reels backward or forward during the operation when necessary. The flow automatically shuts off without leakage or vapors the instant the connection is broken and starts again automatically as soon as the probe is inserted.

Sir Alan said there was "less fire hazard than in fueling on the ground." The chance of failure to make contact between fighter and tanker, he said was "about once in 10,000 times."

Ex-Vaughan Aide

Col. Renfrow Named for Promotion

President Truman yesterday nominated Col. Louis H. Renfrow, an assistant to Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, for temporary promotion to the rank of brigadier general.

Gen. Renfrow

Before transferring to Johnson's staff, Renfrow was an assistant to Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's military aide. He served with Vaughan and Mr. Truman in the Thirty-fifth Division in World War I.

A colonel in the Dental Reserve Corps, he is an honorary member of Battery D, 129th Field Artillery, which the President commanded.

Other nominations:

Maj. Gen. Harry J. Collins to be permanent major general. His present permanent rank is brigadier general.

Brig. Gens. Samuel D. Sturgis, jr., and George W. Smythe and Maj. Gens. Isaac D. White, Cater B. Magruder, William F. Dean and William H. Arnold to be permanent brigadier generals.

Cols. Earl Standley and William E. Shambora, both in the Army Medical Corps, to be temporary brigadier generals.

Air Force Bill Cuts 5100 Off Officer Total

From Press Dispatches

The Air Force authorization bill, which the Senate Armed Services Committee unanimously approved Wednesday, would lop 5100 officers off the 27,500 maximum strength approved last March by the House, it was revealed yesterday.

In addition, the Senate committee's rewrite of the House bill would specifically prohibit the Air Force or the Department of Defense from using aircraft procurement powers to develop "prototype" commercial air lines or cargo planes. "Prototype" bills are pending in both the House and Senate and the committee held the project should be handled separately.

The committee report ascribed as a reason for holding Air Force officer personnel down to probability that otherwise the service would find itself with an officer surplus in a few years "when world conditions are more stable."

Another factor influencing its action was dissatisfaction with the Air Force's recent addition of a medical department, a chaplain's corps and a veterinarian corps. This was "contrary to the understanding (of the Senate) when the unification bill was being considered," it reported.

The committee also revealed that Secretary of Air W. Stuart Symington was overruled by the White House last spring when he sought congressional authorization for a 70-group air armada.

The committee said it sided with the White House against Symington when it voted Wednesday to strike out the 70-group figure from the House-passed bill.

The Senate group granted enough manpower and operational aircraft to outfit 70 groups, but refused to fix that number as either a minimum or a maximum. It also knocked out of the House bill a key provision authorizing the Air Force to purchase 5200 planes a year until it has 70 groups fully equipped with modern planes.

The bill still must go to the Senate floor and presumably also to a Senate-House conference committee for compromise.

aircraft companies during the same time, Wolfe said.

His work for Emerson had nothing to do with contract renegotiation, as charged by Representative Van Zandt and the anonymous document, the witness declared.

Wolfe told the probers that he once owned the Beverly Hills apartment house he now lives in, but declares it is valued at less than $40,000—not $85,000 as alleged. He said he swapped it for a ranch with Navy Capt. Morton Seligman, retired, and then traded it back. It later was sold to another person. His rent for the six-room apartment, Wolfe said, is $50 a month.

International Relations to Be Allowed Japan

By The Associated Press

The State Department said yesterday that Gen. Douglas MacArthur is going ahead with plans to allow the Japanese limited contact with other countries.

Press Officer Lincoln White said MacArthur has the authority to authorize establishment of Japanese consular facilities and to permit the Japanese to attend international conferences and conclude bilateral agreements.

An official of the Far Eastern Commission said the United States proposals were received in June and "virtually amount to authorization of relations with Japan which normally existonly when a treaty of peace and friendship exists between nations."

"The fact that the commission has not yet discussed the proposals may be indicative of the commission's attitude toward them," he added.

Agency Asked To Handle School Surplus Property

The Commissioners yesterday asked Congress for legislation to establish a District agency to handle disposition of Federal surplus property donated to the city for educational purposes.

The recently enacted Federal Property and Administrative Services Act provides that certain surplus equipment may be given to the District and other cities for educational uses.

In a letter to the Speaker of the House, Commissioner Guy Mason suggested creation of an agency with a $15,000 revolving fund and creation of a 10-member advisory board representing local colleges and secondary schools. He said the new body would be self-supporting.

Plane Lands With Low Ceiling, 17 Gal. of Gas

A Navy plane, piloted by a rear admiral and a lieutenant colonel, made a radar landing at Andrews Air Force Base yesterday afternoon with less than 17 gallons of gas left and with a ceiling below 200 feet.

The ground control approach unit at Andrews handled the landing of the JRB-4 plane carrying Rear Admiral L. M. Grant and Lieut. Col. W. A. Rawls from Ohio.

Disability Pay Denied Some Ex-GIs

By the United Press

A soldier who lost both legs in Germany during World War II was Exhibit A at a Senate Finance Committee hearing yesterday.

He did not appear in person and not even his name was given. But his case history persuaded some members of the committee that a change is needed in veterans' compensation laws.

It came up while the committee was considering a House-passed bill to increase veterans' benefits and liberalize some regulations.

Cicero F. Hogan, claim director of the disabled American Veterans, told the committee the soldier, now at Walter Reed Hospital never will be able to draw a Government disability compensation.

He said the soldier was convicted by court martial of a minor offense and imprisoned in an unheated dungeon.

His feet were frozen and had to be amputated.

But under present law, there is no compensation for servicemen maimed while military prisoners, even though they are injured through no fault of their own.

Senator Millikin (R., Colo.) said that sounded "pretty harsh" to him. Other members murmured agreement.

Millikin pointed out that the law would work also to prevent compensation to the families of servicemen killed while under court martial conviction.

Mason to Confer Today On Slum Clearance

Commissioner Guy Mason will confer today with Senators John Sparkman (D., Ala.) and Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) on District slum clearance and public housing plans.

The meeting, to be held at 11 a. m. in Flanders' Capitol office, is the result of the Senators' request for a statement of the city heads' plans for participating in the recently passed national housing bill. Mason will be accompanied by Assistant Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox.

Woods Upheld By Truman in Rent Decision

By The Associated Press

President Truman said yesterday that the failure of Congress to provide sufficient money to enforce the rent control law forced the decision to lift the controls from one-third of the areas which now have them.

Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods had no alternative but to make that decision, Mr. Truman told his news conference. He said that was all Woods could do with the amount made available to him for enforcement.

Woods announced Wednesday the controls will be removed by October 1 in about a third of the areas where they now exist. Details have yet to be announced, but Woods said the changes will be country-wide and not concentrated in any particular section.

He called in his regional officials and other assistants yesterday to discuss the impending changes.

The appropriation bill carrying funds for administering the rent control law still is pending in Congress. Both houses approved it in varying form, and a conference committee undertook to resolve the differences. The House has approved the conference committee's recommendations but the Senate has not yet acted.

Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) served notice he will ask the Senate to reconsider the deep cut made in the funds for Woods' office. The Budget Bureau originally asked for $26,750,000, and the conference committee has recommended only $17,500,000.

Woods indicated controls would not be removed from any community of more than 100,000 population. Other officials said controls would be lifted first in "borderline" areas, where sufficient housing now exists or soon will be available.

Rent controls now are effective in about 1000 counties with 13 million dwelling places. However, the decontrol decision is not expected to affect one-third of the latter number, since the action will not be concentrated in places where the bulk of the rental units are located.

Truman Adamant on Tax Cut

By the United Press

President Truman yesterday said he would not object to lower taxes if other ways can be found to make up the loss in revenues.

He told his news conference that was the only condition under which he would consider a revision of the tax structure.

A reporter mentioned that Chairman George (D., Ga.), of the Senate Finance Committee, favors a reduction in income taxes and abandonment of excise levies.

The newsman then wanted to know whether Mr. Truman would give such action his blessing at the next session of Congress, since it obviously was impossible at this session.

The President replied he would not object to George's proposals if the Senator would find other sources of revenue to keep the Government running.

Citing what he called a lot of yelling about deficit financing, Mr. Truman said that about 80 percent of the budget now represents fixed charges requiring a steady income.

Red Maneuver Averts Threat Of Jail Term

New York, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The defense in the Communist conspiracy trial today changed its line of questioning to prevent threatened jailing of a defense witness who refused to answer a question.

The witness was Alan Max, of the Communist Daily Worker, being questioned by the defense about meetings in June and July, 1945, where reorganization of the party was discussed.

Judge Harold R. Medina asked Max who attended.

Max named himself, Jacob Stachel, one of the 11 top Communists on trial, and Louis Budenz, former editor of the Daily Worker who has renounced Communism. Then he paused.

"I ask you again, 'who were present?" Medina asked.

"I refuse to give any other names," Max replied.

The judge gave Max an hour and three-quarters to "think it over" or face contempt of court citation.

When trial resumed, defense attorney Abraham Isserman announced, "I will not pursue the line of questions about that meeting."

Medina, wrangling with defense attorneys, told them:

"Other lawyers are dismayed when rulings go against them, but they go on to something else . . . and that's what Communists lawyers have to do."

Isserman angrily demanded a mistrial, but this was denied.

Perjury Trial Likely to Face 'Scientist X'

Two investigators of the Un-American Activities Committee are trying to build a perjury case against the "Scientist X" accused of wartime atomic spying.

Representative Velde (R., Ill.), a committee member, forecast the scientist eventually will be brought to trial on perjury charges.

The scientist worked during the war at the radiation laboratory at the University of California at Berkeley, which did some of the secret work on the atomic bomb.

The committee never has named him, although he has figured repeatedly in its spy hearings. Last Monday it repeated in a published document that late one night in March, 1943, Scientist X gave a complicated formula to Steve Nelson, Communist leader.

The committee said the Scientist X case was a "positive case of Soviet espionage," that it was one of three attempt of a Communist cell in the radiation laboratory to get information on atomic development for the Soviet government.

The committee has called Nelson an outright Red espionage agent. Nelson now is a Communist Party organizer for western Pennsylvania.

Science Group Assails Loyalty Program As Deterrent to Atomic Energy Progress

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Loyalty and security programs imposed by the Government on its scientists were assailed yesterday by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Recommendations of its special committee on civil liberties for scientists were published by its executive council, representing 44,000 members and 200,000 other scientists of 211 affiliate societies.

The report termed the Government loyalty and security clearance programs as "basically objectionable," "subjection . . . contrary to national tradition," and "deterring factors in the Nation's atomic energy program."

Congressmen, not named, were blamed for extension of the Atomic Energy Commisison's almost blanket program of security clearance for its scientists, regardless of whether they have access to restricted data.

Brookhaven Plan Cited

"At Brookhaven National Laboratory, for example," the report stated, "where only perhaps one-tenth of the scientific personnel works within the area of secrecy, all scientists must be cleared as a condition of employment.

"This apparently reflects a yielding to uninformed or sensationalist legislators and others who tend to exaggerate the problem of 'keeping our atomic secrets.'"

The report, published in the association's weekly journal, Science, attacked with equal force Executive Order No. 9835, the Truman loyalty order, which provides that no person shall be employed in a Federal post if he is believed to be disloyal to the Government of the United States.

"No one doubts the importance of faithful discharge of duty by public officials," the report said. "No one questions the property of the Government's demanding that its employes be loyal to their jobs and to the democratic institutions they serve.

Calls Order Objectionable

"The loyalty order is, however, basically objectionable because it seeks to determine the employe's loyalty by inquiring into his supposed thoughts and attitudes, which are established in large part by imputing to him the beliefs of his associates.

"If the loyalty order is to be retained, a drastic revision is essential. Instead of focusing on an employe's associations, it should focus on his behavior in overt acts. Legislation already on the statute books amply protects the Federal service against retention of employes who advocate overthrow of the Government."

The report pointed out that the Department of Defense provides military clearance of civilian employes, and appeals to a military "tribunal" only for civilian scientists disapproved by the military.

"Contrary to Tradition"

"Such subjection of the destinies of civilians to military tribunals is contrary to national tradition," the report said.

"If nothing is done to reverse the present trend to require security clearance of scientists who do not have or desire to have access to restricted data, it is likely that many of the most penetrating and original scientific minds will be turned to pursuits unrelated to further development of the atomic energy program.

"Work in that field will be shunned by men of ability and pride if they are constantly treated as objects of suspicion and possible calumny."

The report, following 18 months of study, was compiled by the committee members, all outstanding scientists. They include Maurice B. Visscher, chairman; Philip Bard, Robert E. Cushman, Richard L. Meier and James R. Newmen, with Walter Gellhorn, of Columbia University Law School, serving as consultant.

Miss Bentley Gets Position

Chicago, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Former Soviet spy courier Elizabeth Bentley will teach political science this fall at Mundelein College, a Catholic girls' school, the college announced today.

Miss Bentley, whose cloak and dagger tales of the Communist underground made her a national figure last summer, was converted to Catholicism and baptized last November by the Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen.

Louis Budenz, Communist Party chieftain who also renounced the party and was converted to Catholicism by Father Sheen, attended the baptismal ceremony in Washington.

Miss Bentley made the headlines last summer through her sensational testimony before the House Un-American Activities Committee and before a Federal grand jury that indicted the 12 top Communists in this country for conspiracy.

In her testimony she charged that many highly placed Government officials of the New Deal era belonged to the Communist underground. All denied her charges or refused to testify.

Saunders Drops Keedoozle Idea, Plans Zizz-Buzz

Memphis, Aug. 18 (AP).—The man who made millions of dollars as head of the Piggly-Wiggly grocery stores and then went broke said today that his new automatic store here will not reopen.

Clarence Saunders said his Keedoozle, operated with keys and conveyor belt, "was too much for the average mind to comprehend. It was too far in advance of public thinking."

Saunders said he will open a new store on the site—the "Zizz-Buzz," a store where you punch a button and get your goods.

Saunders, who claims he started the self-service grocery stores, founded the Piggly Wiggly chain.

Papers Won't Be Burned

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The Peronist Party today repudiated bills widely posted here yesterday announcing that 20,000 copies of the independent newspaper La Prensa would be burned in the streets Saturday. The police indicated that no such demonstration would be allowed.

World Bank Lends 34 Million to India

From Canton

U. S. Moving Its Embassy To Hongkong

Canton (Friday), Aug. 19 (AP).—The United States Embassy announced today it was moving its staff to Hongkong, the British crown colony.

The embassy officers will commute daily to Canton, the refugee capital of Nationalist China, as long as the situation permits.

The American consulate general is closing this afternoon.

New Communist victories were reported on every major front:

1. Military spokesman Tang Wen-Yi announced the Communist capture of Tayu, border city between Kiangsi and Kwangtung Provinces, 175 miles north of Canton.

2. In Hunan Province, 160 miles west of the Tayu area, the Communists captured Chaling, 60 miles east of the principal government base of Hengyang and turned in toward Leiyang, 37 south, to cut off any Nationalist retreat. Premier Yen Hsi-Shan ordered Comdr. Gen. Pai Chung-Hsi to hold Hengyang "at any cost."

3. In Fukien Province on the southeast coast, the Central News Agency said, Nationalist headquarters were withdrawn to Pingtan Island, 50 miles to the southeast, before the Communists captured the important port.

4. The Central News Agency said the government had admitted the loss of the Changshan Islands off the north tip of Shantung Peninsula in the Gulf of Chihli. The government had used these islands as a base for blockading the North China Coast. The agency said planes and ships of a "certain country"—presumably Russia—were active in the area.

5. In northwest China, travelers said, Communist armies were within 20 miles of Lanchow, gateway from China to Central Asia and Sinkiang Province. The populace of Lanchow said to be in a panic.

India borrowed 34 million dollars from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development yesterday—the first installment on loans the bank expects soon will total 75 million dollars.

The loan set a number of "firsts":

1. It was the first by the bank to a country in Asia.

2. It was the first "dollar" loan ever obtained by India. India, which has a high credit rating, formerly has done all its borrowing in London in British sterling. India has never negotiated a loan of any kind in the United States before.

3. The loan agreement was signed by Vijaya Pandit, Indian Ambassador to the United States—the first woman to negotiate a loan from the World Bank.

Loan For 15 Years

The loan is for 15 years, at 3 per cent interest, plus a commission of 1 per cent.

It will be used to build up the Indian railroad system. Total cost of the improvement program will be 84 million, of which 50 million is being financed by India from her present resources.

Ten million dollars will be spent in the United States and 17 million in Canada. The balance will be used for spare parts, freight, etc.

Future loans will be to finance an electric power development in the Damodar River Valley and a weed-removing project. India is overrun with Kans Grass, a weed that because of its extensive roots requires special equipment to eradicate.

"Considerable Deficits"

"Before the war," a bank release stated, "India's current balance of payments was normally favorable. Since the war, however, India has had considerable deficits. These resulted largely from heavy imports of grain, machinery and equipment for industry, much of which could be obtained only from the hard currency area.

"Also, Indian exports have not reached their prewar volume. To finance the dollar deficit, India has drawn on the central reserves of the sterling area and has had recourse to the International Monetary Fund, from which she has purchased about 100 million dollars.

"To remedy her balance of payments position with the hard-currency area, India has recently tightened import controls and is increasing her imports from other sources. This policy has become possible because of the increased availability of supplies from these other sources.

Black Leaves for Europe

"The present balance of payments situation is somewhat difficult. An important favorable factor, however, is that India repaid during the war almost all of her foreign debt of 1400 million dollars, and became a creditor vis-a-vis the United Kingdom.

"Drawings on the sterling balances this accumulated helped India to finance her current balance of payments deficits."

Eugene R. Black, president of the bank, is leaving today for a week's visit with Government financiers in Paris and London, he informed newsmen. Black said the bank is not considering raising more capital. It now has about 350 million dollars on hand.

"The bank is geared up better to make loans now than at any previous time," Black said. He predicted "several other loan announcements" in the near future.

Lady Gets a Loan . . .

The Washington Post

INDIAN AGREEMENT SIGNED—Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, the Indian Ambassador, signs a World Bank note for a loan of 34 million dollars for the reconstruction and development of India's railways. Witnessing the signing yesterday are K. R. K. Menon (left), Indian Finance Secretary; and Eugene R. Black, president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. It marks the first time the World Bank has made a loan to a member in Asia and the first time the bank has entered into a contract executed by a lady

Ecuador Quake Victims to Get Food Shipments

The Pan American Liaison Committee of Women's Organizations today will dispatch a half-ton of canned food to the victims of the recent Ecuador earthquake.

Ceremonies at 11 a. m. in the freight office of Capital Airlines will be attended by Ecuador's Ambassador, Augusto Dillon and Mrs. Thomas Burke, president of the committee.

The food was provided free by Phillips Packing Co., Inc., of Cambridge, Md. Capital Airlines will fly the food free to Chicago; Braniff Airlines will fly the food free from Chicago to Ecuador.

This is the first of what is expected to be a series of shipments of food to Ecuador by the committee, composed of 96 women's organizations here.

Stopgap Pay Measure Signed by President

President Truman yesterday signed a stopgap bill giving many Government agencies enough funds to continue operations—and pay their employes—through September 15.

The third stopgap resolution since the end of the fiscal year on June 30 was passed by the House and Senate. It permits a number of Federal agencies, including the National Military Establishment, to continue spending until Congress acts on their regular appropriation bills.

Big 4 Failing In Berlin, Howley Says

Berlin, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Brig. Gen. Frank L. Howley, who attended his last Big Four meeting today, said the East and West are failing to reach the agreements which would make life normal in Berlin.

After a four-hour conference of the four Allied commanders in Berlin today, Howley told a press conference the generals have not complied with the order of the Paris conference of foreign ministers.

Howley plans to return to civilian life in America early in September.

He accused the Rusians of dodging discussions on major questions.

"The people from Berlin suffered from a hard winter under the Russian blockade," Howley said. "And here we are talking about potato bugs."

He said the Russian commander, white-haired, plump Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov, had asked for a four-power directive against the "Colorado beetle."

Howley warned that unless the western governments ware careful, the Russians would jockey them back to 1945, when the four-power government with a veto was established.

He declared the Russians were using every diplomatic trick in the bag to reestablish the four-power Berlin kommandatura, including the veto.

Russians Reported Deepening Ports

Berlin, Aug. 18 (AP)—The Russians are deepening harbors and building fast fishing boats which could be converted quickly into subchasers, reports reaching Western Allied headquarters in Berlin disclosed today.

These reports of activities along the 200-mile Baltic coast in the Soviet zone of Germany followed a report by a German rocket expert that the Russians are building a network of V-2 rocket bomb bases aimed at Western Europe.

Informed American official quarters said there was nothing in the reports for undue alarm.

Allied quarters heard that the activity, centered around such ports as Rostock, Wismar, Greifwald, Warne-muende and Sassnity, is concerned primarily with enlarging the harbors and rebuilding, or refloating sunken German vessels.

Hungarian Parliament Adopts Constitution

Budapest, Hungary, Aug. 18 (AP). Parliament tonight adopted by acclamation a new constitution formally declaring Hungary a people's republic.

The new charter provides that "all the resources and means of production of the country are the property of the state."

Rights Plan Is Submitted By Churchill

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 18 (U.P.). The experimental European parliament had before it today a proposal for a court of human rights which could demand action against any one of the 12 member nations found guilty of violation.

The proposal was submitted by Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime Prime Minister, but it was drafted by the European Movement. The movement's members include Churchill and Paul-Henri Spaak, of Belgium, president of the assembly.

The European Movement also suggested a commission to investigate reported violations.

The court, in cases referred to it by the commission or by member governments, would be "authorized to prescribe measures of reparation" or to "require that the state concerned shall take penal or administrative action in regard to persons responsible for the infringement, or demand the repeal cancellation or amendment" of a national law.

Abdullah in England For Series of Talks

London, Aug. 18 (AP).—King Abdullah of Hashemite Jordan (trans-Jordan) arrived in England today for talks on the political, military and economic future of the Middle East.

Abdullah's visit to Britain as guest of the Labor Government is for 10 days. He is expected to go to France and Spain.

He will confer here with the highest Government leaders and members of the British royal family. He will watch specially arranged displays of Britain's air, land and sea power.

AF Supplies Infantry

Tokyo, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The United States Air Force began flying in supplies today to the Thirty-fourth Infantry Regiment isolated at Sasebo, Kyushu Island, following a typhoon that destroyed highways and railways leading to the city.

Yugoslavia Claims Coal Output Tops Russian's

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported happily today that Yugoslav coal miners had twice broken the Russian record for coal hewn in one shift.

The report said Rista Mijatovic had drilled out 354 tons of coal in one shift while Ibrahtim Trako, also a Yugoslav, had drilled 270 tons, thus "twice beating the Russian record established by Stakhanov of 227 tons."

'State of War' in Caribbean, Dominican Republic Charges

NYHT News Service

The Dominican Republic charged yesterday in a stormy session of the Interamerican Peace Commission that a virtual state of war existed in the Caribbean and that Cuba and Guatemala were covertly sponsoring the Caribbean Legion in plans for a new invasion of the Dominican Republic.

Ambassador Juilo Ortega, head of the special Dominican delegation, angrily submitted what he called proof of an imminent invasion threat by the Legion, a group of armed political exiles dedicated to the overthrow of Caribbean dictatorships, particularly those of the Dominican Republic and Nicaragua.

Before the conference ended, Ortega, who serves as diplomatic trouble-shooter for President Rafael L. Trujillo, was persuaded by the commission not to reveal details of his charges to the press until they had been submitted to the Organization of American States.

Ortega said his government favored a full-scale conference of foreign ministers of the 21-member nations of the OAC.

U. S. Civilian Rule in Reich Starts Oct. 1

Berlin, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The United States occupation regime in Germany will go under State Department control October 1, it was announced today.

John J. McCloy, now American military governor, will become United States High Commissioner.

With the switchover from military to civilian rule in the United States, British and French occupation zones, the federal government now being formed in western Germany will assume control of German administration except for foreign affairs and questions affecting security.

McCloy said the "washing out" of the military government was started Monday and that he expected it would be completed by November 15.

McCloy indicated about 200 civilian jobs would be abolished. He assured military government employes, they would have priority "as far as possbile." It is expected the commission staff will number about 1900.

The new organization will be know as "Hicog."

West German Coalition May Include Socialists

Bonn, Germany, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Leaders of the Christian Democratic Party, largest in Western Germany, today decided to invite their political enemies, the Social Democrats, to join in a coalition government for the new federal state, well-informed sources said tonight.

The decision was reached at a conference between Konrad Adenauer, party chairman, and Karl Arnold, fellow Christian Democrat who is Minister-President for the Ruhr.

The decision was a defeat for Adenaur. He had hoped to form an exclusively right-wing government. It was Arnold who demanded inclusion of the Socialists.

The Christian Democrat Party executive must confirm the decision Saturday.

Albania Sends Envoy to Rome, First Since 1939

Rome, Aug. 18 (NYHT.).—The first diplomat to be accredited to Rome by a sovereign Albanian government since the troops of Benito Mussolini invaded Albania in 1939 arrived Tuesday to establish a legation here for the Communist regime of Premier Enver Hoxha, it was learned today.

The Albanian representative is Zenel Hamiti, 32, who will have the rank of Minister. Omero Formentini, former Italian Minister to Luxembourg, is scheduled to go in the near future to Tirana, the Albanian capital, to set up a legation for the government of Premier Alcide de Gasperi.

Cripps Sails Aug. 27 for Washington

By Ned Russell

London, Aug. 18 (NYHT).—Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, returns to Britain from Switzerland Friday for final preparations for the Anglo-American-Canadian economic talks at Washington beginning September 7.

The Chancellor, undergoing treatment for a digestive ailment at Zurich, will confer immediately with Prime Minister Clement Attlee and will sail for Washington August 27.

He will be accompanied by Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Lewis W. Douglas, United States Ambassador.

The growing demand in British newspapers for a cut in government expenditure to convince the United States the government is willing to make sacrifices to help meet the dollar crisis is accompanied by similar pressure by United States officials in secret technical talks preliminary to the Washington conference.

French Franc Continues Its Downward Trend

Paris, Aug. 18 (AP).—The French franc continued a two-week downward spiral today in trading in gold on the official market.

The French napoleon was quoted at 4510 francs against 4360 at yesterday's close. The Swiss louis was at 4380 against 4270 yesterday.

On the black market the English pound moved above 1000 francs for the first time in several weeks, being quoted at 1010 today against 980 yesterday. The dollar varied between 386 and 394 today, compared to 380-387 yesterday.

Trading sources said some buyers apparently feel the forthcoming monetary conference in Washington may raise the price of gold.

Bonds Slump Again On London Exchange

London, Aug. 18 (AP).—New rumors that Britain may be forced to cheapen the pound drove government bonds down sharply again today on the London exchange.

A war loan 3½ per cent issue which skidded 32 shillings sixpence ($8.50) to £96 15 shillings ($387) led the general decline. Other bonds fell 5 to 22½ shillings ($1 to $4.50).

Today's losses virtually wiped out the last of the gains made in a slow rally last week.

Marshall Plan Needs Scaled To 3.6 Billions as Minimum

Paris, Aug. 18 (AP).—Europe's Marshall Plan needs have been tentatively scaled down to a rock-bottom $3,621,600,000 for the year 1949-50, it was learned today.

Of this sum, Britain has been allotted $842,700,000—a reduction of $675,300,000 from its latest estimated dollar shortage.

The U. S. Senate and House have appointed a committee to split the difference in the total amount of Marshall Plan money they want to make available. The Senate has voted $3,778,000,000. The House is willing to make it $3,568,000,000.

Both European and American experts insist the new figure reached here is not the result of an adjustment in the bills in Congress. It was calculated, the experts say, by "squeezing the water" out of earlier bids, and by drastic "technical screening."

"Of course," one economist said, "we had the congressional figures in mind—but only subconsciously. We never took a total from Capitol Hill and then cut to that."

Other leading claimants:

France 692 million dollars; Germany (three zones) 400 million dollars (approximate); Italy $382,700,000; Netherlands 257 million dollars; Belgium 200 million dollars.

The figures were contained in a report submitted today to the council of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC). The council, OEEC's ruling body, will take it up Friday

In what one expert called "a bombshell in reverse," the Trieste representative—Henri Bardolin—today told the OEEC program committee he was pleased with the 14 million dollars allotted.

Chile Acts With Emergency Power

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 18 (AP).—The government moved quickly with new emergency powers to suppress disorders and cope with strikes in the wake of two days of rioting. The disorders killed seven persons and injured 50.

The government ordered three army regiments into Santiago from nearby Valparaiso, Los Andes and San Felipe.

Blaming Communists for the riots, President Gabriel Gonzalez acted under special powers for the fifth time since he broke with the Communist Party.

Railway workers in Central Chile called a strike this morning and bank employes in Santiago began a 24-hour strike.

Three former Communist representatives in Congress were arrested this afternoon.

University students were blamed for starting the fights in protest over a 20-centavo (1½c) increase in bus fares.

After an all-night special session, Congress gave the administration emergency powers to suppress public assembly, impose censorship on press and radio and permit arrests and searches of persons and property without formality.

190 Pounds Lost By Bull on Way to Wisconsin Market

Fond du Lac, Wis., Aug. 18 (AP).—Joe King left for market yesterday with a 1600-pound bull but got paid for only 1410 pounds. That will teach King never again to walk a bull to town.

King lives 13 miles from the packing house. King has a truck but decided he and the bull would hoof it.

Six hours and 15 minutes later King and the bull arrived at the packing house.

The packing house paid King $274.95. The bull lost 190 pounds en route. That cost King about $30.

"I'll learn," said King.

Yugoslavia Ousts Czech Consul Aide

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Yugoslavia today ordered a Czech consular official to get out of the country after accusing him of trying to sabotage the government of Premier Marshal Tito.

An official announcement charged that Stefan Horvat, deputy Czech consul in Zagreb, had committed "unlawful acts" intended to "strain relations between Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia."

The Communist newspaper Borba accused Horvat of urging "hostile and saboteur elements . . . to commit offenses against Yugoslavia."

The newspaper specifically accused the Czech of giving false passports to a Yugoslav woman, Ljerka Popovich, and her daughters.

Borba said Horvat had urged Mrs. Popovich to flee to Czechoslovakia after asking her to act as a spy.

Czech Communists Urged Slavs to Revolt

Prague, Aug. 18 (AP).—Czechoslovakia's Communists today were waging a big-scale propaganda campaign urging the Yugoslav people to revolt and "destroy Tito's criminal regime."

The campaign also had the apparent kindred aim of stirring up the Czech people against the former Cominform ally.

The drive was featured by the passing of resolutions among workers in Czechoslovak factories and by proclamations issued by Yugoslav emigree groups living in this country.

'Practicality' To Rule Loan To Yugoslavia

Belgrade, Aug. 18 (AP).—A special World Bank Investigating Commission today served notice its recommendations on Yugoslavia's request for a multimillion dollar loan will be based on the Balkan country's full "practical and productive possibilities."

The statement came from A. S. G. Hoar, chief of the delegation and assistant loan director of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. He spoke at a news conference less than a day after the commission's arrival in Belgrade.

Although no official foreign figures have been released, Premier Marshal Tito's government has been reported seeking about 280 million dollars over a long-range period, and about 50 million dollars more immediately to rebuild the country's economy and combat the Cominform's economic squeeze.

Hoar made it plain Yugoslavia's request will get a thorough study both in Belgrade government offices and during an on-the-spot survey of such projects as mines and lumber mills, before the commission leaves in about six weeks.

It appeared evident the loan itself, in terms of delivered goods, will not materialize for about six months. This is ordinary practice when the World Bank deals with loan applications.

Prospects of a loan should strengthen Tito's hand in domestic affairs and in dealing with his Eastern European neighbors who have tried unsuccessfully to oust him for the past 14 months.

One factor in Yugoslavia's favor is that it was one of the countries which joined the bank at its inception.

Yugoslav Loan Bid Link With Mill Deal Denied

NYHT News Service

Eugene R. Black, president of the International Bank, said yesterday that the bank's discussions with Yugoslavia on its request for a $250,000,000 loan have "nothing to do" with the United States decision Wednesday to permit Yugoslavia to buy a $3,000,000 steel mill here.

The decision to grant export permits for the mill, President Truman said yesterday, was made by him on the recommendation of the National Security Resources Board.

Black said the World Bank's talks with Yugoslavia have not dealt with "anything specific."

Vodka Helped Russians Win Yalta Deal, WCTU Head Says

Philadelphia, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The Russians gained concessions at Yalta and Potsdam by plying Allied representatives with vodka while the Soviets drank water from a vodka bottle, the Women's Christian Temperance Union said tonight.

"American representatives wondered at the conferences how the Russians could consume such large quantities of vodka and keep sober, when it had such an intoxicating effect upon the Americans," said Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, WCTU president.

Speaking at the opening session of the WCTU's seventy-fifth annual convention, Mrs. Colvin said reports of the large consumption of alcohol when the great powers met for "momentous decisions is disturbing to thoughtful and prayerful people."

Mrs. Colvin said the drys have been gaining steadily since repeal and that now about one-fourth of the Nation, by area, containing about one-fifth of the population, is dry or bans the sale of hard liquor.

A big dry loss was when Kansas went wet last November, Mrs. Colvin said.

Whenever local option elections are held, Mrs. Colvin said, the drys win three out of every five.

Bridges' Aide Paid $12,000 by Pit Fund

Reject 'Insults'

USW Leaders Quit Talks on NAM Attack

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—Angry leaders of the CIO United Steel Workers stalked out of a presidential fact-finding board's wage hearings today rather than listen to arguments from the National Association of Manufacturers.

"We have to take insults from the parties to this dispute but we don't have to take them from the outside," said Arthur Goldberg, general counsel for the union.

Their ire was aroused by the appearance before the three-man board of Ira Mosher of New York, past president and finance chairman of the NAM.

Mosher attacked the whole idea of compulsory arbitration of labor disputes and scored the steel companies for ever agreeing to the factfinding hearings.

Calls It Double Insult

Goldberg called his remarks "an insult to the board and an insult to the union."

Even steel officials appeared somewhat nettled by Mosher's remarks. Newsmen asked John A. Stephens, vice president of United States Steel, if he planned to answer Mosher's criticism.

"We have enough problems of our own," he replied.

Then, he added wryly:

"After all, you know, the companies didn't go running to Washington when they were first notified of this fact-finding board."

CIO President Philip Murray was absent at the time Mosher took the floor. The walkout of the half dozen labor leaders was led by USW-CIO Vice President James Thimmes.

May Need Added Time

President Truman appointed the fact-finding board in an effort to head off a steel strike. It has until August 30 to furnish him a report, but has indicated it may require a few extra days.

Recommendations by the board are not binding on either the union or the steel companies.

The board has heard union arguments in favor of wage, pension and insurance benefits that they estimate will cost the steel industry 30 cents an hour per man.

Steel spokesmen have replied that the union package will cost from 40 to 73½ cents, break some smaller companies and touch off a new fourth-round wage spiral that may plunge the Nation into a depression.

Mosher appeared on steel company time to address the board. But he said he was not speaking for steel.

By the United Press

The United Mine Workers welfare fund paid $12,000 to an actuarial expert hired by Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), over and above Bridges' own $35,000 annual salary as a trustee of the fund, it was disclosed yesterday.

Bridges recently defended his acceptance of the salary on the ground that a "substantial part" of it was consumed by legal fees and independent actuarial advice in connection with his duties as trustee.

Documents placed in the record of a Senate Banking Subcommittee, at the instigation of Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho), showed that last April Bridges employed Russell E. Reagh for actuarial studies and that Reagh's $12,000 fee was paid by the fund.

Bridges promptly asserted that Taylor's disclosures were nothing but "a move on the part of Henry Wallace's running mate to cause political embarrassment to me."

Denies Contradiction

He said there was no contradiction of his previous statements because he had pointed out all along that the fund hires experts for the use of trustees.

Bridges acknowledged that Reagh, a former Treasury official, and two other experts, were employed at his suggestion and paid by the fund. But he said they reported to the full board of trustees rather than to him personally.

Minutes of the trustees meetings, included in the documents filed by Taylor, revealed that John L. Lewis believed "Reagh was never employed by the trustees, but served for trustee Bridges personally."

Salary Revealed

Last month, Josephine Roche, executive director of the miners' fund, revealed that Bridges is accepting a salary of $35,000 a year, in addition to his $15,000 senatorial income, since he became "neutral" trustee in April, 1948.

She also said Ezra Van Horn, operators' trustee, is accepting a $35,000 salary, but that John L. Lewis, UMW president and trustee, does not.

Van Horn was recently forced out as chief contract negotiator for Northern and Western coal operators as a result of the salary disclosures.

Banking Committee Counsel Robert D. L'Heureux was asked by Taylor for information about Bridges' voting record as a "neutral" trustee.

L'Heureux said minutes showed that on 29 occasions, when there were disagreements among the trustees, "either trustee Lewis promptly backed trustee Bridges or the latter spontaneously and unswervingly rallied to the support of trustee Lewis."

"Trustee Bridges did not side with trustee Van Horn in a single instance," he said.

3-Day Week in Mines Called UMW Bid for Monopoly

By The Associated Press

A Southern coal operator yesterday charged the three-day work week imposed by the United Mine Workers is part of long-term union plans "to fully monopolize and control" the coal industry.

Walter R. Thurmond, secretary of the Southern Coal Producers Association, made the accusation before the Senate Banking Committee investigating monopoly practices by unions. The committee announced it would wind up the hearings today.

Thurmond said the plan was launched as long ago as January 1898. He quoted John Mitchell, then president of the U.M.W., as speaking of an effort being made "to curtail the production of West Virginia coal by attempting to prevent its sale on the market."

Since then, Thurmond said, the UMW, "by any means at its command," has "extended its authority over the mine workers, over the industry and over the country."

Thurmond termed the three-day-week order "one of the most glaring examples of its assumption of monopolistic power." He demanded laws prohibiting unions from privileges industry does not enjoy.

Another witness, Chester C. Thompson, told the committee the three-day week will destroy the inland waterways freight industry. He is president of the American Waterways Operators, Inc., with offices here.

He said bituminous coal is the largest single commodity transported by barge on the Mississippi River system.

U. S. Marshal Seizes Ship At Honolulu

Honolulu, Aug. 18 (AP).—The United States Marshal today seized the strikebound freighter, Hawaiian Farmer, and stevedores hired by the Territorial Government began unloading $750,000 worth of cargo under a Federal Court order.

CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards and independent Marine Firemen's Union members walked off the ship.

The unloading was under an admiralty law order obtained by consignees of the mixed cargo. The action first was ordered July 22, but was stayed to give the striking CIO International Longeshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union a chance to appeal.

District Judge J. Frank McLaughlin last Saturday ordered the unloading to proceed because the union had not posted a $250,000 bond required for an appeal.

Meanwhile, with the Hawaiian stevedore strike in its 110th day, Territorial Government stevedores were unloading the Panamanian ship, Nortuna, and the Isthmian Line ship, Thomas Cresap, in Honolulu, and were loading the Isthmina's Stell Architect, at Kahului on the island of Mau.

The Territorial Government has gone into the stevedoring business under a special law in an effort to end the strike-imposed paralysis of Hawaiian commerce.

The Government still was holding off on a test of its law, in which the union president, Harry Bridges, defied an antipicketing injunction and picketed the freighter, Hawaiian Merchant, Monday.

132,000-Volt Shock Survived by Lineman

Mansfield, Ohio, Aug. 18 (AP).—A lineman today was hit by 132,000 volts of electricity, but lived.

Orley Whitcomb, 28, of Ashland, was working on an electric tower near Mansfield. Although he was burned over most of his body when he touched the "hot" line, his safety belt prevented him from falling. His condition is fair.

Company officials said the current passed through Whitcomb for about a sixth of a second.

ITU Rejects Demand Strike-Defense Moves Be Revealed

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 18 (AP).—The International Typographical Union convention today turned down a demand that the ITU leadership give a full accounting on a hush-hush strike defense activity.

Ford S. Goetz of Ventura, Calif., declared the membership was entitled to know more about the operation and expenditures of an ITU holding company known as Unitypo, Inc., and other union ventures.

Secretary-Treasurer Don Hurd, opposing six amendments to by-laws proposed by Goetz, merely referred to Unitypo as a defense activity.

However, in a recent article in the Typographical Journal he mentioned that it had established competitive newspapers in strike or lockout areas. It was organized for the purpose of holding title to real estate.

The delegates defeated another proposal to raise the death benefit ceiling from $500 to $750 for members of more than 15 years standing.

International officers will be elected by the general membership ballot next May 17.

For president, Clifford G. Sparkman, of Detroit, first vice president, John R. Evans, of the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, George Bante, Chicago, Jesse L. Manbeck, also of Washington, who opposed Evans, was able to muster but two votes. Evans got 18.

Party Pledge Set Up For States Righters

By The Associated Press

A pledge of future party loyalty may be asked of any Southern States Righters who show up to vote on the choice of a new Democratic national chairman.

This formula for dealing with committee members who joined in the civil rights rebellion last year was laid down by a high Democratic official yesterday as President Truman implied that the decision not to invite some Southern members has his full backing.

The national committee meets next Wednesday for the scheduled election of William M. Boyle, jr., now a $30,000-a-year executive director, to succeed Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island as chairman.

McGrath, unanimously confirmed by the Senate yesterday to succeed Attorney General Tom C. Clark, now draws no committee pay.

In his call for the committee meeting, McGrath said he hadn't invited members of the national committee who strayed off the reservation last fall in support of the Thurmond-Wright States Rights ticket.

When reporters asked the President about this at his regular news conference, the President replied that the committee is in control of its own membership.

With a significant look at newsmen, Mr. Truman said the committee is made up of Democrats.

McGrath didn't send invitations to some of the committeemen and committeewomen in four States where the States Righters have controlled the party organization—Mississippi, Louisiana South Carolina and Alabama.

However South Carolina Democrats yesterday chose Senator Maybank (D. S. C.) as national committeeman to succeed Gov. J. Strom Thurmond who headed the States Rights ticket. Myband accepted and there was no doubt that he would be welcomed by the national committee as a member.

There was still a contest in sight for the committeewoman's post from South Carolina. Senator Olin Johnston (D., S. C.) said he hoped Mrs. Anne Agnew of Columbia would be retained in the place.

Senator Taft to Make 88-County Tour of Ohio

By the United Press

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), whom labor organizations are "out to get," announced yesterday he will make a 13-week speaking tour of Ohio this fall despite the delay in congressional adjournment.

But he said in a statement that the tour, through 88 counties, will not be a "campaign trip." It is scheduled to start September 4.

"After all, I'm the representative of some seven million people in Ohio and I owe them a report on the action of Congress," he said. "As I have tried to do before, I hope to go out to all the different cities and county seats in Ohio and explain why I have been for certain legislative matters and why I have been against others. These things are reported in the newspapers but they are not given with any detail of explanation.

"In the second place, I want to see the people and find out what they are thinking. I am elected to represent their views here in Congress. I hope to meet with farmers, workmen, veterans, teachers and with every group interested in Federal legislation and discuss such legislation with them. There aren't going to be any political meetings."

Beside Ferguson, Taft and Flanders, the Republicans who voted against Clark's confirmation were Senators Donnell (Mo.), Kem (Mo.), Vandenberg (Mich.), Watkins (Utah) and Williams (Del.).

After his confirmation, Clark called on President Truman to thank him for the appointment. Clark told reporters he is not sure when he will take the oath of office. He said that before setting a date he would have to confer with Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and McGrath.

May Take Holiday

The retiring Attorney General said he may take a brief holiday at the home of his brother, Robert, in Santa Monica, Calif., before assuming his new duties.

McGrath, in addition to being a Senator, is Democratic National Chairman. He will resign both posts. The party chairmanship will be filled at a national committee meeting here next week. William Boyle, of Kansas City, now vice chairman, is expected to get the job.

McGrath's successor in the Senate will be named by Democratic Governor John O. Pastore of Rhode Island.

Ferguson challenged Clark's record in a number of instances, including the Kansas City vote fraud case of 1946. He revealed for the first time that the Senate Investigating Committee had testimony from D. Milton Ladd, an assistant director of the FBI, that on Clark's instructions, FBI files on the case were stripped before the committee received them.

'Gross Mismanagement'

Ferguson said Ladd's testimony was that "intra-bureau memoranda" and other administrative records were taken from the files and the numbers changed to make it appear the flies were complete before the committee received them.

Ferguson accused Clark also of "gross mismanagement" in the escape to Europe last May of Gerhard Eisler, German Communist, alleged to have been the top Communist agent in the United States.

Ferguson said he would have liked also to question Clark about his "reported justification of wiretapping," a 1937 Texas Legislature investigation of Clark, and the part Clark played in the paroles of four alleged Capone gangsters.

Senator Johnson (D., Tex.) replied:

"The case of Tom Clark does not need defense on the floor of the Senate. It is defended by his own deeds in the service of the Nation."

Charges 'Old Stuff'

Johnson read a letter from Representative Poage (D., Tex.), who was chairman of the Texas Senate committee that investigated Clark's 1935 and 1936 income. He said the inquiry developed nothing moral or legal against Clark's actions 14 years ago.

Connally, describing the charges against Clark as old stuff that had been hashed over before, pointed out that Ferguson had voted for Clark's confirmation as Assistant Attorney General and as Attorney General.

Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Judiciary Committee, who has tangled with Clark over Government loyalty files said:

"There is not a thing to say against Tom Clark, except that he has fearlessly prosecuted the law."

McGrath Praised

Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) said Clark "has turned me down oftener than any other man and yet increased my friendship for him. It takes a real man to do that," he added.

Senator Green (D., R. I.) led in paying tribute to McGrath. He referred to the fact that McGrath had resigned governorship of Rhode Island to accept appointment from President Truman as Solicitor General of the United States.

McGrath's "long and varied record of public service shows that he has the ability, the courage, the personality and the training to make an excellent Attorney General," Green said.

'Lonely Hearts' Pair Sent on Way to Chair

New York, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Fat Martha Beck and slick Raymond Fernandez, the "lonely hearts" killers who bared every ugly detail of a nightmarish love affair in a desperate grasp for life, were sent on their way to the electric chair today.

A Bronx County jury of 10 men and two women, exhausted after night-long deliberation, found them guilty of the first degree murder of an old widow who had become infatuated with the gold-toothed, toupeed Fernandez and moved in with him and his "sister," the 200-pound Mrs. Beck.

But even the "no mercy" verdict of the court failed to break the placidity of Martha Beck or the suaveness of Fernandez. He ate a heavy lunch and went promptly to sleep at the Bronx County jail. The 29-year-old Mrs. Beck chatted at the women's detention home with anyone who would listen to her impressions of a sordid life of incest, greed and murder.

The jury had disagreed on only one point—whether Fernandez, 34, had premeditated the slaying of Mrs. Janet Fay, 66, Albany, N. Y., widow. Mrs. Beck struck the elderly woman down with a hammer in a Long Island apartment last January and Fernandez throttled her with a "tourniquet" made of the hammer handle and a scarf.

But Judge Ferdinand Pecora kept the jury at its task from 7:53 p. m. last night until 8:30 this morning, when two undecided jurors finally were convinced that Fernandez was after the $8000 that Mrs. Fay had trustingly given him.

The jury's verdict meant that Pecora must pronounce a death penalty when he sentences the pair on Monday. If the appeal by defense attorney Herbert Rosenberg fails, they will go to the chair at Sing Sing—Mrs. Beck the eighth woman in New York history to so meet death.

Evidence Piles Up

Mickey Cohen Pal Faces Indictment

Los Angeles, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Federal authorities have enough evidence to ask criminal indictment of one "major member" of the Mickey Cohen mob, it was disclosed today as the dapper little gambler made some threats of his own.

Cohen hinted strongly that he had some ammunition he can fire if the investigation of his activities gets too hot.

City, county, State and Federal authorities all are interested in Cohen's activities, including possible income tax irregularities. United States Attorney James M. Carter said five Federal agencies were cooperating in a full-scale investigation.

He said evidence probably would be placed before the Federal grand jury, August 31.

Carter said he had copies of transcriptions of Cohen telephone conversations.

He also said Federal investigation disclosed that "underworld characters" sought to tap city police lines.

Cohen has a complete copy of the transcriptions. He said he recently turned down an offer from "other officials" to sell him another copy.

He refused to say who had sold him the copy.

Another source said Cohen had paid $20,000 for it.

'Hearts' Couple Face Death

Court to Rule On Custody of Girl to Chinese

Boston, Aug. 18 (AP).—Judy talked to a judge today, but she probably didn't know that the man in the black robe must decide whether she can go back to her Chinese "daddy" or grow up in a new home.

Pudgy and pigtailed Judy Ann Rouf, 4, walked across a courtroom and into the lobby of Probate Judge Robert G. Wilson, jr.

He said he wanted to talk to her after he listened to three pleas for the little girl—from Chinese laundryman Jack Ho and his white wife, Berthilde; from Judy's mother, Mrs. Dora C. Rouff, 24, and from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Donnelly of Burrillville, R. I., who have already adopted Judy's sister.

The blonde and dimpled youngster was with the judge only a very few minutes. When she came out she walked past her mother and took the hand of Mrs. Ho.

The judge has reserved his decision in the custody hearing, which began when Ho and his wife petitioned to keep Judy. They said they took her two years ago and taught her to talk "English and Chinese."

They said later Mrs. Rouff tried to take Judy from them.

Introduced was a note to Mrs. Ho that Judy's mother admitted writing. The note told the Hos they could have Judy "for good."

Mrs. Rouff also testified that she had asked Ho for money "seven or eight times" but "never more than $2.50."

She told the court her husband disappeared and she couldn't care for Judy because she lost her job.

The laundryman's wife was asked: "What do you think of the future of a child who has a white woman as a mother and a Chinese for a father?"

Mrs. Ho answered: "I think it's all right. We live in a different age now. Children are taught in school that they are all Americans."

Cashier Accused Of $5000 Theft

WILLIAM W. HOLLENSBE, 39, a Purdue University cashier, was quoted by Michigan police as admitting he took more than $5000 from the university after his arrest in a bar in Bay View, Mich. Hollensbe was returned to Lafayette, Ind., and was freed in $2000 bond on a charge of deserting his three children. The charge was filed by his brother. His wife is in a Lafayette sanitarium

Rita Hayworth Expects Baby, Aly Discloses

Deauville, France, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Prince Aly Khan disclosed today that his actress wife, Rita Hayworth, is expecting a baby.

His announcement confirmed rumors that have circulated for several weeks. But he revealed no details as to when the baby was expected or where it would be born.

The announcement was brief. Through his secretary he told the United Press: "You may officially announce that my wife is expecting a baby."

Rumors that Rita was expecting a child began shortly after they returned to Paris from their fabulous Chateau de l'Horizon in the hills above Cannes. Rita appeared to faint several weeks ago at a Paris racetrack and Paris afternoon newspapers hinted broadly the actress was expecting.

Aly and Rita were married last May 27 in southern France in what has been described as the "wedding of the century," and which followed a dazzling international courtship.

The Moslem prince said he decided to make the announcement after he was deluged with press reports that he termed "completely false rumors."

He said he was annoyed particularly by reports in English newspapers that said the prince planned to have his child baptized in a Catholic church in Deauville, the faith to which Rita was born.

"This report is completely untrue," he said.

Defendant Given Time To Find Alibi

Where is Shorty?

That is the $64 question that Lloyd T. Thomas, 29, of 1514 8th st. nw., must answer by August 25 or face possible grand jury action on charges of unauthorized use of a truck.

Thomas was arrested by Police Pvt. Walter Connolly Tuesday night while at the wheel of a truck reported stolen from George W. Sterling, 1518 Church st. nw. Five other persons, including two women, were in the truck at the time.

In Municipal Court yesterday, Thomas told Judge Fennell he didn't know the truck was stolen and anyway, a man named Shorty picked him up in it and then asked him to drive because the former had been drinking.

Thomas testified he didn't know the rest of Shorty's name or where he lived except "he hangs out at 6th and O or 9th and O sts. nw."

"This is the same story I hear again and again," Fennell commented. "They never steal the cars themselves—but maybe this man is telling the truth."

The jurist then set $1000 bond for a continued hearing August 25 to give Thomas a chance to find his alibi.

Gaming Spot's Ex-Operator Nabbed Again

The former operator of a fancy gambling casino here—and currently out on bond on an attempted-larceny-by-trick charge — was nabbed yesterday by police and charged with passing phony checks.

Charles R. Warde, 53, of 1935 Park rd. nw., was arrested on the complaint of Martin H. Downs, manager of the Kilbourne Liquor Store at 3174 Mount Pleasant st. nw., where Warde allegedly passed two bad checks, one for $75 and one for $32. Arraigned in Municipal Court, Warde demanded a jury trial.

Served 13 Months

Warde was paroled from Lorton Reformatory May 13, 1948, after serving 13 months on a charge of setting up a gaming table.

The plush Trojan Club, 1745 Massachusetts ave. nw., of which Warde admitted being the co-owner, was raided by police in March, 1946.

During the trial of Warde and two others the club, with its expensive chandeliers, thick rugs and dinner-coated waiters, was described as "a haven for tired businessmen."

As late as July of this year, Warde was arrested by Prince Georges County police as he was trying to talk a Colmar Manor, Md., woman into investing $9000 in North Carolina oil leases.

Food-Hunting Bears Invade Northern Minnesota Cities

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 18 (AP).—Invasions by hungry bears had residents of some northern Minnesota cities on the defensive today.

Onerampaging bruin took the leading role today in a combination regatta, roping contest and slapstick comedy at Duluth.

Another bear at Virginia, described as "plenty big," invaded a home and "ate everything but the kitchen sink" and then ruined that, while frightened Mrs. Walfred Makkyla and her two children barricaded themselves upstairs.

Bears, hungry because of a short wild berry and choke cherry crop this year, have been visiting city areas the past two weeks in search of food. Some have been shot at Duluth, Two Harbors, Virginia and Hibbing.

The bear that invaded downtown Duluth today gave one man a sample of his teeth. It was sighted near the Duluth ship canal, a short distance from the city's main thoroughfare. A crowd gathered at a safe distance. Bruin jumped into the water and started swimming.

Three men obtained a boat and started for the animal. Bruin, however, climbed into the boat and the three men went over the side.

As the last man was hurriedly leaving, the bear bade him farewell with a bite—right on the part that was uppermost at the time. The bear again took to the water. Police shot and killed it.

LIEUT. JOSEPH SHIMON
Investigator transferred

porters he would have no statement to make on the Shimon transfer yesterday but probably would remain in the city overnight and might make a statement this morning.

Sources close to the police wiretapping investigation said police officials had determined that Shimon had been conducting investigations outside of his official duties.

Reports that Shimon had possibly worked on the large-scale gambling investigation of the United States Attorney's office were denied by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, who is substituting for Fay while the latter is on vacation.

Fihelly said Shimon has done a "spendid job" as head of the D ision of Investigation in Fay's office.

"The work," said Fihelly, "done by Lieutenant Shimon and his men in the investigation unit on criminal complaints made to this office was separate and distinct from work done by special investigators, not members of the Metropolitan Police, who were hired during the grand jury investigation.

"Neither Lieutenant Shimon nor any of his men were ever given a single assignment relating to, nor did they do any work whatsoever in connection with, the gambling investigation.

"I have been told in confidence the alleged reason for the transfer of Lieutenant Shimon and can state that the reason given to me had nothing whatsoever to do with any work performed by Lieutenant Shimon for this office."

Shimon, who will be 43 next Wednesday, was appointed to the police force on August 17, 1929. He was first assigned to the traffic division, then shifted to the Third Precinct.

He became a precinct detective January 1, 1932, and was made a detective sergeant, the youngest in the department's history, on October 1, 1933.

Shimon was a favorite of Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, at that time chief of detectives, and his political supporters included the late Senator David I. Walsh (D., Mass.)

Thompson made Shimon an acting lieutenant on March 8, 1938, and put him at the head of the pickup squad, an assignment that gave Shimon almost complete freedom of action in any type of case.

Shimon was promoted to full lieutenant on December 16, 1941.

During his career, Shimon has had several brushes with the late Col. Edward J. Kelly, police superintendent, and later, with Barrett.

Shimon's record shows 15 commendations, two of them from Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.).

Nina Lunn Luttrell, blonde society beauty, was secretly divorced two months ago in Arlington County, Va., in a "sealed" divorce suit, it was learned yesterday.

Her husband, Nathaniel H. Luttrell, jr., Washington business executive and heir of the late Woodward & Lothrop director, was granted an absolute decree of divorce June 16.

The suit was not contested and it was settled five days after it had been filed.

Papers Ordered Sealed

Circuit Judge Walter T. McCarthy ordered that all pleadings and papers in the suit be sealed and decreed that the papers cannot be unsealed without a formal order of his court.

Miss Lunn, who was permitted to resume her maiden name under the decree, is a granddaughter of former Senator Wallace H. White (R., Me.).

Recently, Washington society has linked romantically the names of the 24-year-old Miss Lunn and Jeronimo Remorino, Argentine Ambassador to the United States.

Grounds Remain Secret

Remorino, who is 47 and a bachelor, is now in Buenos Aires but is expected to return to Washington soon. Miss Lunn is currently vacationing on a ranch in Wyoming.

The grounds on which Luttrell obtained his speedy divorce will remain secret inasmuch as the court ordered all papers in the case sealed, something which is done in such cases "only once in a blue moon," according to Arlington attorneys.

The Luttrells were married January 8, 1948, at the Sulgrave Club in a brilliant society wedding at which the late Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, then chaplain of the Senate, officiated. The couple later took up residence at 6407 Wilson blvd., Arlington.

Lift Crab Blockade, Md. Official Asks

SALLY RAHN,

32, Pittsburgh elevator operator, braved a $15,000 fire yesterday to carry scores of terrified persons from the upper floors of a burning office building. She made two trips until heat forced her to take over another lift. Then she made two more trips with near-panicked passengers until smoke and heat caused her to abandon the car. Only two persons were burned and a third was treated for hysteria

Old Point Comfort, Va., Aug. 18 (AP).—Maryland's fisheries chief tonight proposed lifting a Chesapeake Bay crab blockade to keep peace between his State and Virginia.

Chairman David H. Wallace of the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission declared the fatal shooting of a crabber in the bay last month had brought boundary differences to a head.

Each State now bars outsiders from crabbing on its side of the wandering border across the bay.

Suggests Reciprocal Pact

Earl Lee Nelson of Crisfield, Md., was shot by a Virginia Fisheries Commission deputy, David Acree, in July. Acre said he boarded Nelson's boat to arrest the Marylander for crabbing on Virginia's side of the line.

Relations between the two States have reached "a most difficult phase" in the boundary area, Wallace said.

He suggested a reciprocal arrangement which would permit scrapers and potters to cross the border freely, so long as they obey the regulations of the State in which they are crabbing.

Wallace also asserted no Chesapeake Bay fish problems will be settled without a "joint interstate authority to regulate the fisheries."

He spoke at a Virginia Fisheries Association meeting called to seek an answer to current scarcities of migratory fish. Delegates from North Carolina also attended.

Wallace said Maryland's Governor William Preston Lane, jr., backed his proposals.

Says Each State Would Benefit

Lifting the boundary line to crabbers would help each State solve its shellfish production problems, Wallace said.

Crabbers on either side of the border have common interests, he added, and they should be permitted "equal opportunities in the area."

An Accomack County grand jury convened two days ago and refused to indict the Virginia fisheries deputy for Nelson's death. The shooting occurred in Virginia waters when Nelson tried to snatch a gun from Acree, the jury said.

Maryland also had issued a murder warrant against Acree, insisting Nelson was shot on its side of the boundary. Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia turned down a request for extradition.

Rep. Lane Asks Federal Potato Support Probe

By The Associated Press

Representative Lane (D., Mass.) wants the House to investigate the Federal potato price support program, particularly in Aroostook County, Me., the country's principal late-potato growing area.

"I am astounded," Lane told a reporter yesterday, "at the stupendous payments reportedly made to potato growers in the Aroostook County area. These huge payments, I understand, tend to keep the prices to consumers of this basic food at a high level."

Lane late yesterday introduced a resolution "authorizing and directing" the appointment of a seven-man select committee of the House to investigate support prices on potatoes, especially as they apply in the Maine county.

Asks Select Group

He said he asked that a selected and impartial committee be named because it might embarrass farmer members of the House Agriculture Committee to make such an inquiry, although the Agriculture Committee has authority to make such a study.

Lane wrote Chairman Cooley (D., N. C.), of the House Agriculture Committee, that he had read "with a great deal of interest the news stories written by John W. Ball of The Washington Post on the Government's potato price support program."

"I, like many others," he wrote, "am surprised as to the cost of the program in Aroostook County of Maine, and the amount of money made by the potato farmers in that section of the country."

Potatoes are the only perishable crop on which there is a mandatory price support program. The Aiken-Hope Agriculture Act provides that potatoes be supported by loans, purchase or other governmental activity at from 60 to 90 per cent of parity (parity is a price calculated to be fair to both producer and consumer).

For the 1949 crop, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan set the price support at 60 per cent of parity and reduced acreage allotments from the previous year.

Estimate Over 50 Million Dollars

The department estimates the potato price support program this year will cost the Government between 50 million dollars and 100 million dollars.

In support of his investigation proposal Lane placed in the Congressional Record a letter from F. D. Powers of Winthrop, Mass., quoting from one of Ball's stories appearing in the Boston Globe and captioned:

"Arrostook Potota Farmers Get 65-million-dollar Price Support. Two Producers Paid $500,000 Cash."

"Our present Administration," Powers wrote, "is constantly getting after companies to reduce their prices so as to reduce the cost of living, but the articles which hit us most—that is food—are being held up by the Government through subsidies and the farmers, both in the Middle West and Aroostook County, have had prosperous years."

Barkley Lauds 'Progress' On Promises to Farmers

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 18 (AP).—Vice President Barkley today said the Democratic Administration is making "great progress toward the fulfillment of our promises to the farmers."

Barkley was the headline speaker at a State fair rally by thousands of Democrats opening their fall campaign activity.

U. S. Senator Scott W. Lucas, who is expected to bid for re-election, said that Republican Party leaders are "bankrupt of ideas" and are "still living in the days of the past."

London Reviewing Plan For Italian Colonies

London, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—A new plan for the disposal of the former Italian colonies is under consideration here and will be discussed shortly with other interested parties for submission to the United Nations, diplomatic sources said today.

The plan provides for home rule for Tripolitania—most disputed of the former colonies—and proposes to leave open to future decision by the people of the country the question of a United Libya.

The two chief agencies engaged in this were the Extension Service and the Soil Conservation Service. County Agent Verne Beverly and his efficient staff spent long hours and distributed tons of manuals telling how two potatoes could be made to grow where only one grew before. The Soil Conservation Service was demonstrating to all who would listen how modern farming practices also increase yields.

Acreage Allotments Cut

This year's acreage allotments for Maine were cut almost 25 per cent—23.6, to be exact—by Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan last spring.

Yet so successful have Brannan's experts been in extension education and soil conservation that it is expected that three fourths of Brannan's acreage cut will be offset by increased yields.

The county agent taught the benefits of more and better fertilizers, closer planting, improved insecticides and fungicides.

Soil Conservation has taught how to conserve moisture by strip planting, contour plowing, etc. So well have those lessons been learned that an early summer drought that in previous years might have been catastrophic left the crop almost undamaged.

Per acreage production may be increased by these new methods and treatment as much as 10 to 13 per cent. The reductions due to the acreage cuts thus will be almost wiped out.

Brannan also reduced the support price from 90 per cent of parity to 60 per cent. That will bring a reduction in Government purchases this year, but not so great as earlier expected. Some Maine experts think that this year's cost may be more than half the 67 million of last year.

Taken Off Diet Lists

To add insult to injury, the home economics experts of the department have, over the years, published diet lists excluding potatoes. The lowly tuber was too starchy, too fattening. But with potatoes "running out of their ears" at the department, they have tried to withdraw such advice. But the habit is set. Few diet lists (and they have been unusually popular again this year) ever suggest potatoes. When they do, they permit a single, small, baked one very occasionally.

A study of the Maine potato industry indicates a strong similarity between our old tariff laws to "protect infant industry" and the price support policy to protect the small farmer.

As the tariff was most beneficial to "infant industries" such as United States Steel, the Aluminum Corp., etc., so is the price support program more beneficial to the big grower than to the small farmer.

A Maine potato grower planting 500 acres last year can take the cut in support levels from 90 to 60 per cent of parity and the simultaneous cut in acreage better than the man planting 40 acres.

Potato raising is an expensive operation. The necessary machinery, the required labor expense, call for a greater investment than most types of farming.

The potato farmer needs a planter, a digger, special cultivators, trucks and tractors, all extra-priced stuff. He must have barrels and sacks. He needs sorting machines to separate the different grades. The investment in these varies little, whether for 40 or 400 acres.

The man growing 500 acres can cut his acreage to 400 and employ the unused labor to plant the extra 100 in oats, barley, wheat, on which this year he is eligible for price support.

Difficulties Encountered

A smaller operator, however, if called upon to cut his 40 acres to 30, will find it difficult to utilize his remaining 10. He hires his labor at planting and harvesting time, whereas the big planter employs some labor all year long. The problem gets more serious as the farm acreage gets smaller. Many of those who raised only 30 acres last year are seeking outside employment this year to make up for the cut to 23 acres.

The cuts also injure the small farmer when selling time comes. The Government buys only in carloads. If a farmer hasn't a full carload he has to pool his potatoes with other small growers. The pooled cars are handled by dealers, who then sell the full carload to the Government, collecting a brokerage fee, usually $15 a car, from the farmers.

The result is that the small Maine farmer is complaining loudly about the acreage cut piled on top of the cut in the support level.

On the other hand, the big operator urges a lowered support level. He also will accept a further cut in acreage if he is sure all potato acreages in the country are cut similarly.

The big operators realize that the present "gravy train" can't run on forever.

How the price support program works out in practice is emphasized in the Maine potato experience.

First, the taxpayer is assessed for 67 million dollars to spend in Maine last year to hold up the price of Maine potatoes. (In the country as a whole the total was 225 million.)

Next, that expenditure was used to force that same taxpayer this time a consumer, to pay the highest price he ever knew in peacetime for potatoes for his dinner table.

Third, the high prices forced by the price supports cut per capita consumption of potatoes to the lowest figure in history—108 pounds, as compared with 123 the year before and 144 as recently as 1935.

If such conditions continue, they may well cost the potato industry the permanent loss of much of its market.

Premier Denies Secret Pact on Belgian Uranium

Brussels, Belgium, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Premier Gaston Eyskens said today that "Belgium is not bound by any secret treaty forcing her to reserve the Belgian Congo's uranium to any particular foreign power."

A five-year agreement among the United States, Britain and Belgium under which the Congo's entire uranium ore production was shipped to atomic plants in America expired recently. A new one is being negotiated.

The Senate gave Eyskens a 99-to-51 vote of confidence. The House supported him 125 to 64 yesterday.

Maternity Homes Offer Girls Aid

Twenty or thirty years ago, maternity homes sometimes "made" decisions for U. Ms. Now it is pretty well accepted that the girl who is "in trouble" must be treated as an individual. She must figure out her own plan, but with skilled help. She must decide whether to keep her child or offer it for adoption. The agency will help her carry out these decisions.

Statistically, unmarried mothers fall into these general categories:

1. Those whose pregnancies and child placement can be handled within the family. These girls make their own hospital arrangements and take advice from relatives or friends on child placement. They seldom seek agency help.

2. Those who can finance their own hospitalization but seek counseling service in placing their children either for adoption or in foster homes. They may also ask advice on their own futures.

3. Those who wish maternity home care either because they are away from home and friends, or because their pregnancy is a secret.

Of the latter group, some can afford to pay for this type of maternity care; others are without funds.

There are four maternity homes in Washington for unwed mothers: Florence Crittenton Home, with a capacity of 48 girls; St. Ann's Infant Asylum, with a capacity for 32 girls; the House of Mercy, with a 24-girl capacity, and the Iona Whipper Home, with a 15-girl capacity. Together they cared for approximately 385 unwed mothers during the calendar year 1948.

Of these homes, Florence Crittenton and House of Mercy are nonsectarian; St. Ann's is primarily for Catholics but accepts those of other faiths in unusual circumstances; the Whipper Home is entirely for Negroes.

The Man Who was scared out of his skin

These homes charge an admission fee, which includes room and board and takes care of pre-natal and post-natal care, delivery and care of child while the mother convalesces. Usual period of residence is two months before childbirth, and about six weeks after delivery.

The U. Ms are asked to do some work, but no more than they would be asked to do in their own homes. Household chores are divided and rotated, and a girl may be excused from some duties if she has an obvious preference for others.

While in residence at the homes, the girls are allowed some freedom. At Florence Crittenton and the House of Mercy, for instance, they may go out unchaperoned in the afternoon, if they wish. At St. Ann's, they also are permitted to leave the grounds for reasonable outside pursuits. In addition, at Florence Crittenton there is a program of arts and crafts for the girls, and planned recreation in the evening under leadership of a trained group worker. Other homes also encourage this type of activity.

In a case where a girl does not have the admission fee, payment usually may be arranged on a deferred basis, or a "referral" agency may supply funds for the girl's accouchement.

Florence Crittenton has its own hospital within the home grounds, but girls at the three other homes are sent out for hospitalization.

Although thety do not maintain separate maternity homes, the Family Service Association, Children's Protective Association, Catholic Charities and Jewish Social Service Agency also work closely with unmarried omthers.

They may refer a girl to one of the maternity homes, either helping to finance her stay there or acting as counselor for her in working out her plan. They also may help the girl who goes to a private doctor and hospital for childbirth to work out her plan, once the baby comes.

The Board of Public Welfare's children's services division performs a somewhat similar function, although its services are limited to District residents. The Welfare Department also may certify girls to receive public assistance during the period they are incapacitated for work, and may arrange for placement or adoption of their children.

In some cases, the Woman's Bureau of the Police Department may enter the picture to establish a child's paternity. This is done where the support of the child, or his adoption, is in question.

The bureau also investigates cases of single girls who were under 16 at the time of conception, since, under District law, this constitutes statutory rape.

In addition to the Board of Welfare's child placement service, there are seven other licensed child-placing services which act in clearing adoptions in Washington.

These are Catholic Charities, the Lutheran Inner Mission, the Barker Foundation, Children's Protective Association, the Methodist Board of Child Care, St. Ann's Infant Asylum and the Jewish Social Service Agency.

In adoption cases, social workers do their best to learn as much as possible about the heredity and environmental background of both the child's parents. At the same time, they closely question the prospective adopting parents on their background, educational level, heredity.

Every effort is made to match hereditary and national strains, educational, intelligence and religious backgrounds so that the child will grow up under circumstances similar to his own parents' environment and harmonious to him.

Of the maternity home service available to unwed mothers, Florence Crittenton is supported in its operation 34 per cent by United Community Service. St. Ann's Infant Asylum receives 59 per cent of its support from UCS. The Iona R. Whipper Home is a member of UCS but must raise its standards to be included as an agency. The House of Mercy is supported by endowment and private contribution.

Of the other agencies which offer service to unwed mothers as part of a larger program, the Board of Public Welfare is, of course, a tax-supported institution.

The Jewish Social Service Agency receives 76 per cent of its support from UCS; Family Service Association gets 94 per cent of its support from UCS; Children's Protective Association, 79 per cent and Catholic Charities, 72 per cent.

Is the community doing its job to help meet the problems of unwed motherhood? No one can surely say. At least, the community is growing away from the belief that an unwed mother should wear the "scarlet letter," and toward the conviction that society, generally, must bear some of the blame for the U. M.

of the Nation and such places as restaurants, hotels, movies, public recreation areas, hospitals and schools will be available to all citizens regardless of their creed, color and economic status."

Isidore Dollinger (D.): "If they get the bill out, I'll vote for it. People here should have the right to vote, if they want it, and the bill calls for a referendum on that."

Christopher C. McGrath (D.): "I think they should elect their local government here. It would free the House of a great deal of work and give us more time for national legislation."

John C. Davies (D.): "I'd be inclined to be against it because Washington was always set up to be a workshop of the Government and not a political entity or political subdivision of the country. I think all affairs of the District should be run by the Federal Government without any voice by local residents."

William L. Pfeiffer (R.): "I'm for it. I think the Capital certainly should enjoy the same privileges as the rest of the country. I don't think Congress is capable of running the District's affairs."

Anthony F. Tauriello (D.), a farmer city councilman: "I'm for giving them home rule. I feel the people down here should vote like the citizens anywhere else. I'm going to support it."

Chester C. Gorski (D.), former city councilman: "I'll vote for home rule."

In addition to these new members, seven other New York State House members who also served in the Eightieth Congress were not recorded when the House voted on home rule last year. These are their opinions today, as given to The Washington Post:

James J. Heffernan (D.): "I don't know enough about it to say at this time."

Abraham J. Multer (D.): "I'm for it and definitely intend to vote for it if it comes up again."

Emanuel Celler (D.): "I'm for home rule. I also had a bill in to let you have your own Congressmen. They voted here once before, why not now? The people of the District of Columbia are not insane or imbeciles and therefore should not be treated like wards."

Charles A. Buckley (D.): "I think the people of Washington should have home rule. If I were living in Washington, I'd want to have the officials here elected by the people. Then if the people were dissatisfied with those they'd elected, they could vote a change."

Ralph W. Gwinn (R.): "I haven't seen the bill but generally speaking I'm in favor of the District running its own affairs."

Joseph L. Pfeifer (D.): "I'm in favor of it."

Dean P. Taylor (R.): "I would favor a home rule bill and I'd be inclined to go along with the Kefauver bill."

he said, of the American and European hospital systems. Gilbert Stanley Underwood, Public Buildings Administration architect, who visited Europe last year inspecting hospitals there, will be architect for the structure here, General Fleming said.

Three Washington hospitals—Emergency, Episcopal and Garfield—will join facilities in the center. Each will have its own separate division but economy and medical effectiveness will be obtained through having many facilities in common.

The only naval facility which will remain on the observatory site, said General Fleming, will be the home of the Chief of Naval Operations.

Construction of the center by the Federal Works Administration was authorized by Congress in 1946. Present appropriations make available $21,700,000 in cash and contract authorization.

Other corporation officials elected at yesterday's meeting in General Fleming's office were A. Murray Preston, member of the board and executive committee of Episcopal Hospital, secretary, and Frederick Bradley, Washington attorney, treasurer.

Need for the new center has long been described as urgent, its supporters pointing out that combined capacity of all Washington hospitals is far below the city's needs.

Negroes Ask Repeal Of City Racial Zoning

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 18 (AP).—Birmingham Negroes appealed to the city commission today to reconsider its past action and abolish racial zoning in this deep South city.

The plea was drafted at a mass meeting of more than 2,000 Negroes. It was held in a residential section where five Negro houses in a white zone have been bombed since March.

The Negroes pledged themselves to use every lawful weapon until "freedom from the reign of Jim Crowism is won."

The commission adopted an ordinance August 7 making it illegal for a Negro to move into a white residential area, or a white person to move into a section occupied by Negroes.

Burmese Envoy Fetes Foreign Minister

The Ambassador of Burma and Mme. So Nyun entertained at a reception last evening in honor of the Foreign Minister of Burma, U. E. Maung.

Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India, was among the guests. She was accompanied by the Indian Minister and Mme. Sen, and her daughter, Miss Rita Pandit.

At the Burmest party last night the soft grey drawing room was a good background for the different costumes of the embassy staff members and their wives. The men and women both wear skirts called longhis. Women top theirs with blouses and men wear jackets. Of the two, the men are more colorful. U Khin Maung Gale, Second Secretary, wore a pink gaung baung on his head, a handsome black jacket and an orchid longhi.

Called the Irish of the East, the Burmese have charm and a quick sense of humor. The ladies hold a high position in Burma and are considered better business executives than the men. In fact, one Burmese lady stated, most of the office work is done by women. There will doubtless be a lady ambassador from Burma some time, she added.

The Ambassador of Thailand, Prince Wan Waithayakon, also attended the reception as well as the Ambassador of Ceylon and Mme. Corea.

Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sparks, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Satterthwaite, Lee West, C. O. Hare, Mr. and Mrs. David Fernsler and Egbert Matthews.

in June. Union leaders asked the trade union federation to take strong action toward increasing wages, but the federation replied such actions were forbidden by law.

It said also the cost of living had decreased. The federation has threatened to expel from its membership unions answering the Communist strike calls.

Here is the schedule for other strikes: August 20, woodworkers, including carpenters, plywood makers and match factory hands; August 22, transport workers and plumbers at Turku, 90 miles west of Helsinki; August 23, leather, shoe and rubber workers, and meat and fish processing workers; August 24, textile workers; August 26 sea divers; August 27, bricklayers.

October 1 Date Set for Sesqui Building Start

Ground will be broken for 10 million dollars worth of sesquicentennial buildings by October 1, "if our luck holds," Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman of the Sesquicentennial Commission, said yesterday.

But before the wheels can roll, Barron said, the commission must first get the three million dollars that was approved by the House, but which is awaiting Senate action. Six hundred thousand dollars of this money will be used to finance ceremonies during the two-year celebration of Washington's 150 years as the Nation's Capital. The remaining money will be used as "a cushion" for the ten-million-dollar construction program, Barron said.

After the commission has the three million dollars, its leasing bureau will still have to get enough contracts from industrial exhibitors to warrant proceeding with the construction program.

Barron said yesterday that he was encouraged enough to think that the leasing bureau might get enough commitments within 30 days to start digging.

Fully leased, Barron said, the industrial exhibition will bring in revenue of 11 million dollars.

The sesquicentennial buildings will be 80 per cent permanent Barron said. For 20 per cent more money to heat the buildings, they will be valuable Federal assets, he said. A master contractor will be engaged by the commission to supervise construction. All work will be submitted to bids.

Although the sesquicentennial is scheduled to last for two summers, 1950 and 1951, Barron said yesterday that it may continue for a third summer if the demand exists.

CTC Dispute Arbitrators To Be Named

Selection of arbitration board members in the wage and contract dispute between the Capital Transit Co. and its union employes will be made on Monday by the company and the union, it was learned yesterday.

The arbitration agreement of July 1, which averted a strike of operators and maintenance men, called for appointment of a panel of seven members by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, which has been done.

The next part of the procedure, in which the company and union strike off two names each, will be effected at a meeting scheduled for 2 p. m. Monday between CTC General Manager Samuel E. Emmons and President William F. Simms of the union, Division 689 of the Street Electric Railway & Motor Coach Employes of America.

In addition, the arbitration board will include a member named by the union, and one named by the company, for a total of five members. These selections have already been announced as O. David Zimring of Chicago for the union and John Curtin of Philadelphia for the company.

Closing of Schools Opposed by AMA

Chicago, Aug. 18 (U.P.)—The American Medical Association warned tonight that closing of schools and places of recreation and amusement in the face of a polio wave may "bring more trouble than good."

The AMA said in its journal that it was against "disturbing or altering unnecessarily the normal pattern life in the community.

"Whatever is done to upset the usual routine of children in a household or of adults in their habits is likely to bring more trouble than good as far as control of infantile paralysis is concerned," it said.

Against Closing of Schools

The AMA said public and private schools should not be closed during a polio outbreak, nor their opening delayed except for specific reasons. However, it said, schools to which children are transported by bus from widely separated areas, or boarding schools exclusive of coleges and universities, should delay opening if there is polio in the area.

"Summer camps should open as usual unless there is an outbreak of poliomeylitis in the area in which the camp is located," it said.

"Places of recreation and amusement need not be closed; however, the attendance of children at such places should be discouraged."

It said "reliable evidence is lacking" that polio may be spread by insects, water, food or sewage.

Expectancy statistics show, the AMA said, that about 50 per cent of victims will emerge from the disease free of crippling effects, 25 per cent will have mild physical limitations, 15 per cent will have severe crippling and 5 to 10 per cent will die.

Fatigue Plays Part

Pregnant women "probably" are no more susceptible to polio than other persons, and children born of mothers who have polio are normal.

The AMA said fatigue plays a part in the early stages of polio and that children should be prevented from becoming over-tired during the polio season.

Six measures were recommended:

1. General notice to physicians and the public at large of the prevalence of the disease, description of its characteristics and the necessity for medical care.
2. Isolation in bed of all children with fever, pending diagnosis.
3. Education in techniques to prevent the spread of the disease from patients isolated in their homes.
4. Postponement, if possible, of nose and throat operations or dental extractions.
5. Avoidance of excessive physical strain.
6. Avoidance of unnecessary travel and visiting, especially by children.

New Aorta Gives Boy, 17, Normal Life

Denver, Aug. 18 (UP)—William Neil Mills, 17, had a chance to live tonight because another teen-ager died in an automobile accident.

At 12, his parents were told the boy would die inevitably in his 20's because of a congenital heart defect. Physicians said his aorta, the major artery leading from his heart, was constricted. Only a thin trickle of blood was reaching his legs, while "backed-up" blood threatened his heart and brain with a hemorrhage that would eventually lead to paralysis and death as he reached maturity.

Today, Bill finished painting the family garage, worried about how soon he'd get his driver's license, and planned a career as a chemical engineer—his latest ambition.

Doctors have assured him that as a result of an operation he underwent June 28, "no normal activity is denied you." The operation was without precedent in this area, although similar cases have been treated at Children's Hospital in Boston.

In the 11½-hour operation, a 3-inch section of the "great artery" from the teen-ager who died 52 days before was transplanted into Bill's chest.

The preserved aorta from the accident victim—kept alive in salt and plasma solution under refrigeration—was on hand for just such an emergency.

"In a sense," Bill's doctor said, "Bill owes his life jointly to the other teen-aged boy and to several dogs as well.

"This type of operation would be totally impossible unless we had checked it carefully in experimental animal laboratories."

2 New Polio Cases Listed in D.C. Area

For Nation

Week's Cases Of Polio Hit Year's High

An unwanted record of 3158 new cases of infantile paralysis were counted in the Nation last week, it was reported yesterday by the U. S. Public Health Service.

The number, by far the largest weekly toll this year, brought the 1949 total to last Sunday to 13,901 new cases, as against 8430 stricken by polio in the same period last year.

However, the health officials released statistics to indicate recent increases may be due to a new virus disease which strikes like polio but leaves no paralysis.

38 Pct. Nonparalytic

Of 9668 cases reported on or investigated in 29 States in 1948, they reported, some 3695, or 38 per cent, were found to be nonparalytic. In 1946, their report continued, some 8759 cases were followed up in 12 States and 2718 were found to have been nonparalytic.

In contrast, during the Nation's record polio year of 1916, "practically all" of the more than 30,000 cases recorded were accompanied by some degree of paralysis.

Last week's 3158 new cases contrast to 2451 during the previous week and represent increases in all major geographic divisions of the United States and increases in all but 10 States.

Those without increases included Rhode Island, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, Oregon, Texas and California.

The District of Columbia reported eight new cases last week to bring its 1949 total to 25. During the same week last year the District recorded seven new cases to bring its total then to 31.

26 Cases In Virginia

Virginia reported 26 new cases last week, or just half the number during the corresponding week of last year. Of last week's new cases in the State, one was from Alexandria, another from Fairfax County and two from Arlington County.

Maryland's record for the week showed seven new cases to bring this year's total to Sunday to 48 cases. Of this total, 21 were reported from Prince Georges County, including the county's five new cases last week. Montgomery County had five new cases last week, to bring its 1949 total to nine.

Benning Rd. Project Bids Are Rejected

District Commissioners yesterday rejected all bids submitted on proposals for improving Benning rd. from Oklahoma ave. to Kenilworth ave. ne., the second phase of the Benning rd. widening project.

The city heads acted after receiving a complaint from the Highway Construction Co., 7th and T sts. ne., second lowest bidder, that the low bidder did not meet specifications.

The firm contended, through its attorney, Ringgold Hart, that for 25 years the District has required asphalt produced by the "batch" method and the low bidder, Curtin & Johnson, Inc., 1125 Brentwood rd. ne., submitted a bid of $172,855 based on use of asphalt made by a "continuous" mix, a newer technique.

Hart argued that bidders would have submitted lower figures if they had known the District would accept the "continuous" mix.

The Commissioners thereupon rejected the bids and directed Deputy Director of Highways Samuel R. Harrison to readvertise the project and to include a section informing bidders that the asphalt may be produced by either method.

Harrison said the change will delay the project about five weeks. It is expected to take two months to complete the paving after a contract is awarded.

Three children, two from the Washington area, were reported by hospitals yesterday as new cases of polio.

One of the victims reported yesterday at Gallinger Hospital is a 13-year-old boy from the 300 block of 37th pl. se.—the River Terrace area. He was admitted Wednesday night.

The other area victim is a 6-year-old Prince Georges County boy who lives in the 550 block of Parkland ct., Suitland. He was admitted to Children's Hospital August 12.

A 5-year-old boy from Quantico, Va., also admitted to Children's Hospital August 12, was reported yesterday as a positive case of polio.

Capital Transit Stock Hits New Peak for 1949

By S. Oliver Goodman

One hundred shares of Capital Transit Co. common stock changed hands yesterday at 21¾ on the Washington Stock Exchange, a new peak for the year.

The stock had sold as low as 17¼ this year and 11¾ last year.

A recent upward movement in the transit issue was stimulated by the bid of $20 a share by a Florida group of nine businessmen for a block of 109,458 shares held by the North American Co. Also, it was learned that the same group, headed by 37-year-old Louis E. Wolfson, has accumulated more than 1000 shares through open-market purchases.

The block of 109,458 shares, if purchased by the Wolfson group, would amount to 45.61 per cent of the 240,000 outstanding shares or effective control. Apparently, the group seeks 51 per cent control through additional purchases.

At present, the Interstate Commerce Commission is considering whether or not to authorize the transfer of North American's block of Transit stock to the Wolfson associates. An ICC examiner recommended that the deal be turned down. A formal decision is not expected until early in September.

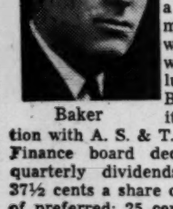
In addition to the Wolfson factor, Capital Transit stock has been in demand locally because of an improved earnings record. This has been reflected by the payment of two 50-cent quarterly dividends so far this year and indications that another 50-cent dividend will be declared soon. Last year, the Transit Co. paid only one 50-cent dividend to stockholders.

NEW DIRECTOR: Robert C. Baker, a vice president and director of the American Security & Trust Co., was elected a director of the State Loan & Finance Corp., President Davis Weir announced yesterday. Baker, a former Richmond banker, was associated with the Columbia National Bank prior to its consolidation with A. S. & T. State Loan & Finance board declared regular quarterly dividends as follows: 37½ cents a share on both classes of preferred; 25 cents a share on Class A and B stocks. All dividends are payable September 15 to stock of record September 1.

Baker

INSURANCE: Washington sales of ordinary life insurance totaled $10,957,000 in July, an increase of 3 per cent over the same period last year. For the first seven months, insurance sales here aggregated $78,775,000, up 3 per cent. The increase here was contrary to the trend in two nearby States and nationally. For July and the first seven months, percentage declines in policy sales were as follows: Maryland eight and five; Virginia 11 and 6; National five and one. The figures were reported yesterday by the Life Insurance Agency Management Association.

ELEVATED: John E. Slater has been elected president of the American Export Lines, succeeding the late William H. Coverdale.



Slater

Slater, associated with the transportation industry since graduating from Harvard University in 1913, joined A. E. L. in 1934 as a director. A year later he became executive vice president. Joseph A. Thomas, general partner of Lehman Brothers, was elected A. E. L. board chairman, a position likewise formerly held by Mr. Coverdale.

FUEL OIL UP: Esso Standard Oil Co. announced an advance in the consumer price of home heating oil ranging from 0.3 to 0.6 of a cent a gallon in its Washington marketing area, effective today. In a statement, Esso said: "For many months No. 2 heating oil (for homes mainly) has sold at subnormal levels, but in the past few weeks demand has become very strong and prices in primary markets have advanced sharply."

ODD LOTS: The chant heard around the globe will be sounded today when tobacco auctioning begins on the world's largest flue-cure tobacco market in eastern North Carolina . . . A $9,500,000 order for electrical steel mill equipment to be used in a new plant in northern France has been received by Westinghouse Electric Corp. . . . Ford Motor Co. has contracted for the construction of a new plant near Buffalo, N. Y., for the production of body parts . . . Auto production this week is estimated at 137,467 units, slightly below last week's 142,215. Work stoppages at Chrysler and Hudson contributed to the lower total.

EARNINGS: Burroughs Adding Machine Co. reported net income of $4,656,317 or 93 cents a common share for the six months ended June 30, compared with $6,338,641 or $1.27 a share in the same 1948 period. Other earnings reports:

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 18 (AP).—A sharp upward drive by soybeans in the closing minutes featured a generally firm grain market today. Both the November and December soybean contracts moved to new highs since trading in them started. Lard came along for good gains, too.

Grains opened firm and held onto their gains throughout the session. Only exception was rye, which ended lower on light commission house selling which found little support under the market. Corn acted best of all the grains, aided by announcement of expanded Government storage plans.

Wheat closed 1⅛-1⅜ higher, corn was 1¾-2⅛ higher, oats were ¼-⅜ higher, rye was 1 to 1½ lower, soybeans were 3¼-6¼ higher and lard was 20 to 43 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Trading was very heavy in beans during the closing minutes. Once the November contract had broken through its previous seasonal high, stop loss orders which had been placed in the market by shorts were touched off. The market pushed up under the spur of this buying and final prices were the day's highs.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—Cotton futures were steady today in slow dealings. Mill buying again accounted for much of the support in the market. Demand was also stimulated by reports of considerable weevil damage to the cotton crop in parts of the Eastern and Central belts. Final prices were 40 to 55 cents higher a bale.

Sneak Legislation

A sorry piece of legislative trickery has been slipped over on the Nation's renters—and, presumably, on most members of Congress themselves. This consists of a crippling cut in the appropriation for the office of the housing expediter, the agency administering rent control. The cut was engineered, not openly, but in a House amendment to the independent offices appropriation that crept in almost unnoticed. The result is that the housing expediter must dismiss nearly half his employes and decontrol one third of the country's rent areas in order to maintain effective controls in the remainder.

If Congress had decided openly to end rent control, that would be one thing. But such is not the case. Less than five months ago, Congress passed a new rent control law, strengthening the old law in some respects but qualifying it with local option and a proviso for a "fair net operating income" for landlords. Application of the "fair income" formula increased the workload of OHE offices from 30 to 50 per cent, and there was a tacit understanding with Congress that the housing expediter would be given the employes necessary to do the job. As a matter of fact, several hundred areas have been decontrolled, either by local action or by the expediter, since the new law took effect; thus there is strong need for rent control in the remaining areas affected by the cut.

It is clear in the law that Congress intended to continue rent control. What has happened is the old and nefarious practice of legislation by appropriation. Originally the housing expediter asked for $26,750,000. The Senate Appropriations Committee approved $24,075,000, and this was cut on the floor to $21,667,000. House conferees refused to agree to this figure, and later the House adopted an amendment limiting the sum to $17,500,000. In what must have been a spurt of confusion, the Senate agreed to this figure.

Senator Douglas has offered a motion to reconsider the Senate action which will be taken up today. We do not see how Senators who realize the consequences of this backhanded legislation can fail to support his motion.

Deprivation

The recent decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in the matter of John W. Carter has implications reaching beyond the case itself. The Court of Appeals reversed a District Court order revoking a license granted to Carter to do business as a bondsman. The basis of the revocation appears to have been confidential information made available to the District Court by the FBI. Neither Carter nor his counsel was permitted to know the contents of the FBI report. There is no question that the bonding license could have been denied Carter when his application was originally pending by a procedure of this kind. But, ruled the Court of Appeals, "the application had been granted. Carter had an authorization. He was engaged in business. The action of the court was not to deny him something he was seeking; it was to deprive him of something which he had."

The distinction is a vital one. It seems to us to be one which Judge Holtzoff might well have taken into account in his decision a fortnight ago in the case of Dorothy Bailey. It is indisputable, as the judge declared, that "no one has a constitutional right to Government employment." But that is not the essential question. The essential question raised by Miss Bailey's plea was, rather, whether someone who already had a Government job could be deprived of it under circumstances amounting to the severest sort of punishment—without even the Loyalty Review Board chairman being given a chance to confront FBI informants.

Obviously Government employes may be summarily dismissed for a variety of reasons—cuts in appropriations among them. The Carter case decision does suggest, however, that incumbency confers a right to a fair hearing when the dismissal is on charges of disloyalty. Certainly this is the theory behind the Lloyd-Lafollette Act governing the treatment of Civil Service employes. When dismissal, as in Miss Bailey's case, entails disgrace and disqualification from all Federal employment—and a wide area of private employment—it scarcely seems unreasonable to expect at least the measure of procedural protection prescribed for the revocation of a bondsman's license.

Aims And Arms

The 50 per cent cut in the MAP voted by the House last night is a tribute to the statesmanship of the House of Representatives. The dissenters in the House Foreign Affairs Committee who proposed this cut were on a wiser track than the majority who reported the bill to the legislature. None of the dissenters quarrels with prompt interim military aid to our North Atlantic Treaty partners. They accept, that is to say, the logic of the pact. But they wanted both to reduce the amount and to insure a "fresh look" when the Atlantic Allies have agreed upon unified planning and direction of Atlantic defense.

Administration spokesmen have been one Fat Boy after the other in making the committee's flesh creep about an emergency in Europe. The idea has been left in the legislative mind that the Russians are contemplating armed attack on Europe. With all due respect to our strategists, this is not the kind of emergency that this newspaper envisages. It is urgent to give interim aid to Europe as an earnest of a real program, not because the Russians are about to attack but because the defenders of Europe are losing both expertness and confidence for want of modern weapons. And it is no less urgent to defer large-scale arming till a plan providing for the integration of Atlantic defense has been worked out. The real emergency in Europe, in other words, is not lack of arms, but lack of unity. Let us "push and prod" to get this ahead of a sizable appropriation, rather than after, as in the case of the Marshall Plan. As the Richards-Vorys-Judd-Burleson minority group says:

> By implementing half of the proposed plan at this time, we are showing our good faith, our willingness to go forward. By reserving action on the other half, we will in effect give notice to all of the governments concerned, including our own, to come up soon with an agreed over-all plan. We believe that this approach, providing an inducement to greater cooperation, will contribute to the ultimate success of the program, which is not attainable without such unity.

The Joint Chiefs come back from Europe with a good report about organizational progress in Europe. But the report was too glowing. To be sure, the Europeans have gone a long way in developing a defense organization. They have an agreed operational plan of what each government will do if one country is attacked. Joint training has started, something like standardization—that all-important requirement—is beginning. However, authority over defense policy and budgets, over armed forces, over armaments production—this authority is still national. And the whole direction and planning still remains to be dovetailed into the larger alliance with North America. Coordination—that poultice word which has come to be used nowadays to delude the people that unity exists where there is disunity—is simply not good enough in the present situation of the world.

It is a tragic fact that American arms are strewn all over the world doing some good but a lot of mischief. This is due to the fact that they were not tied to a world policy based upon a set of recognizable principles, as, for instance, anticolonialism. It is often said that political integration is impossible in Europe without prior security. Now the United States has embarked with a unanimity rare in its annals upon the task of doing all in its power to afford that security. It has said to Europe: The United States has declared officially you are part of our defense area, and the logic of that recognition is that your defense is our defense. But something else is necessary from Europe to create a sense of security. In a word: unity of command. None knows better than we do that this is difficult, but the Western world is now faced with a problem which admits of no other solution. There is no security, only an invitation to attack where the invitation doesn't exist at present, in providing arms to separate national establishments of which the Russians, with their massive armament and single organization, are contemptuous. "It is necessary," as the Richards-Vorys-Judd-Burleson minority says, "to go half way now, in order to overcome their (the Europeans') concern, but it is also necessary for these countries to meet us half way, to overcome our concern that they will not get together."

Greek Cleanup

Encouraging news is coming out of Greece. Both the Greek War Minister, Panayotis Kanellopoulos, and the chief of the American military mission, Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, indicate that the back of Communist resistance has been broken—though General Van Fleet is more cautious than Mr. Kanellopoulos in his reminder that the civil war will not end with the current Vitsi and Grammos campaigns. It is, of course, well to remember that the Communists have eluded traps before. Nonetheless, there appears to be a definite withering on the vine of the rebel forces, concurrently with an increase in proficiency of the Greek army. The question that soon must be answered is: Where does Greece go from here?

Can Greek forces, for example, be expected to maintain order without further American help? The United States already has expended 322 million dollars in military aid and currently is going on a 70-million-dollar advance from the 1950 appropriation. Undoubtedly there are elements in Greece which find it profitable to continue the war. Even assuming that these forces can be circumvented, probably it will be necessary to continue some form of military help on a diminished scale beyond fiscal 1950.

For the likelihood is that the war will come to no very precise termination. The best hope lies in effecting a closure of the Greek borders. To all intents and purposes a tacit understanding already exists with Tito's Yugoslavia, and most of the trouble is coming from Albanian support of the guerillas. Indications are, however, that the Hoxha regime in Albania is running into difficulties, though the possibility of a continued threat from this source cannot be discounted. Hence the Greek military effort must be directed at garrisoning the Albanian border and maintaining enough troops there to contain sporadic forays, while, from the American standpoint, the time seems to be overripe for political action in Albania.

Reorganization

Six of the seven reorganization plans submitted by the President become effective at midnight—a high score for the Administration. Nevertheless it is too soon to assume that these initial victories open the way for acceptance of other presidential reorganization plans based on Hoover Commission recommendations. For the plans that have survived congressional scrutiny are limited in scope and do not entail any sweeping changes in the organizational set-up. Even so, there was strong senatorial opposition to Plan 2, transferring the Bureau of Employment Security to the Labor Department, while Plan 7, transferring the Bureau of Public Roads to the Department of Commerce, squeaked through the Senate by a narrow margin.

The most important of the seven plans, No. 1, moreover, providing for the creation of a Department of Welfare, has been rejected by the Senate for reasons unrelated to the merits of the program. It was attacked from the floor because it embodied only part of the Hoover Commission recommendations. One would conclude from the remarks of some Senators that the commission's recommendations are in the nature of commandments to be religiously observed. This attitude of reverence is, of course, absurd and merely muddies the waters of debate, as Senator Humphrey said.

Other opponents of Plan 1 directed their fire at Oscar Ewing, head of the Federal Security Agency, whom they assumed would be selected by the President to head the proposed Department of Welfare. Criticism of Mr. Ewing was also irrelevant, since the issue was not whether the Senate liked or disliked that official but whether the public interest would be served and economy and efficiency in Government advanced by the new organizational set-up. The proper time to test Mr. Ewing's qualifications would be when his anticipated nomination came before the Senate for confirmation. Acceptance of Plan 1 involved no commitment to approve of anyone whom a majority disapproved. Arguments directed against Mr. Ewing were simply a smoke screen, concealing hostility to a program that some Senators feared would turn the scales against creation of an independent united medical service.

Many features of the reorganization program still to be considered are highly controversial and strong congressional leadership and constant plugging will be necessary to put them over. In some instances, special legislation will be required to make them effective. If either the House or Senate rejects otherwise desirable programs merely because of fear that they will be carried out by officials whom the legislators distrust or because the plans do not embody all the Hoover Commission's recommendations, a thoroughgoing reorganizational reform of the executive establishment will be impossible of attainment.

Books Abroad

Conscientious objectors who worked on farms and in hospitals in lieu of military service during the war were not allowed to receive for their own use the wages which they earned. Instead, these wages were paid to Selective Service and kept in the Treasury in a special deposit. They aggregated, in round figures, about 1¼ million dollars—a tidy contribution on the part of the COs. There was a kind of unofficial understanding between Selective Service and the COs that at the end of hostilities the latter would be allowed to designate the use to which this contribution should be put. An informal poll was taken in 1945 among the men whose earnings created the special Treasury deposit. The consensus was that it should be devoted to relief purposes, and this year the National Service Board for Religious Objectors requested that the money be used through the CARE book program for the benefit of the war-destroyed libraries of Europe. It seems a singularly apt designation in keeping with the principles to which the COs adhered.

Senator Sparkman in the Senate and Representative Judd in the House have introduced bills to bring this wish of the COs to realization. Their bills would simply authorize a contribution to CARE of an amount equal to the moneys received by the Selective Service System for work performed by the COs. The authorization is, in a sense, an obligation of the United States and deserves congressional assent now despite the pressure of more weighty and urgent measures. It would constitute, moreover, a most felicitous way of acknowledging the real and respectable service rendered by the men whose consciences forbade them to fight; and it would render valued aid in the cultural rehabilitation of Europe.

"Home Rule Shelved"

The Judiciary Subcommittee of the District Commitee of the House of Representatives has seven members. At least two of them are known supporters of home rule for the District of Columbia.

This means that on August 16 not more than five men voted to table the home rule bill.

These men—five at the most—seek to prevent the democratic process from functioning. They would not have the full District Committee consider home rule. They would not have the House of Representatives consider home rule. They would not have the citizens of the District of Columbia consider home rule for themselves in the referendum for which the bill provides.

In short, they would themselves decide, if they could, that nobody else shall have even the opportunity to vote on this issue.

It cannot be emphasized too often that the enactment of the home rule bill would not automatically give home rule to the District of Columbia. It is a bill to give the people of the District the right to adopt home rule if they want to. Some members of the subcommittee appear to have persuaded themselves, in the face of all the evidence, that the people of the District do not want home rule. The bill provides that that question shall be determined at the polls, as it should be.

It is still to be hoped that the full District Committee of the House will disown the action of its subcommittee, stand up and be counted, and report the home rule bill—favorably or unfavorably—so that the House itself can decide whether the citizens of the District shall have a chance to govern themselves in their own local affairs if they want to do so.

Please accept the thanks of this citizen of the District for your editorial of August 17. Its restraint strengthens the justifiable indignation so forcefully expressed.

"Julian the Apostate"

Your editorial of August 7 disparaging the intellectuals because of the case of Julian Wadleigh must not go unchallenged. If "the agonizing responsibility that appears to weigh upon him for the condition of the world" is typical of the intellectual, it is the glory of all men of good will in a world whose condition plainly wants improvement.

Who, if not the intellectuals, is to take such responsibility? Is it a monopoly of the politicians? Unhappily, the failure of the intellectuals has too often been their withdrawal to ivory towers. Far too many have been far too little, not "much, much too trustful" of themselves. Instead of having the intellectual "ask himself what reasons he has for supposing that the condition of the world will be better for his personal intervention in the processes of history," we should call him down from lofty isolation to take his share of a citizen's responsibility.

"The time is out of joint," and we all are "born to set it right," each according to his lights. This is the mark of Government by the people, in contrast to dictatorship.

Julian Wadleigh felt that "some-thing drastic" had to be done to check fascism and to prevent war, and felt the need for him to help. While Julian Wadleigh's action was thoroughly reprehensible, it grew, let us remember, precisely in an atmosphere of prevailing indifference and escapism in the face of an earthquake. Had democracy not slept the sleep of the just; had we not taken an easy and proud refuge in 'business as usual'; had there been more people to share with him rather than deride that agonizing responsibility for the condition of the world—a Julian Wadleigh might have found lawful, constructive and effective outlets for his desire to stave off the disaster that presently befell us all.

Outdated Signs

In Washington the other day I was appalled to see a truck with a sign "Buy War Bonds!" I accepted such injunction as necessary when I lived in Washington during the war. I was ashamed when I returned to Washington four years later and saw these appeals.

Are we working for war or for peace? We can never attain the latter if we keep on constantly thinking and talking war. Can you not lead a movement to change these signs as evidence that we Americans really do want a peaceful world?

Atlantic Union

The opposition of the Daughters of the American Revolution to the idea of Federal Union is reminiscent of the bitter antagonism to the idea of a federalized Union of the American States in 1783 and during the succeeding years. The opposition arose greatly from fear that federalization would curb the prerogatives of the States.

History has proven these fears to have been unfounded, for out of that unity has grown the greatest federation in the world today, where law and order, peace and economic prosperity have reached peaks heretofore undreamed of.

A federation of the signatories of the Atlantic Security Pact would be a herculean task, and mountains of prejudice would have to be overcome, but if security from another world tragedy, more devastating than that we have just witnessed, can be attained, no task would seem too great or too heavy to be borne.

The strength of a union of the Atlantic Community would be so overwhelming that no adversary would dare break the peace. Each one of us can do our part in working towards this goal. Information can be obtained from the head office of the Atlantic Union Committee, 537 Fifth ave., New York 17.

Cooperative Housing

At first glance your August 14 editorial on cooperative housing appears to be critical of the entire idea of Government assistance to groups of individuals desiring to obtain homes under cooperative principles.

A more careful reading indicates that your opposition to the cooperative features of the Sparkman bill is directed toward Title 3, which provides for the setting up of a separate constituent agency of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and for the making of direct loans to cooperatives at an interest rate of 3 per cent, with amortization running up to 50 years.

In the interest of clarification, I wish to invite your attention to the fact that there are other provisions of the Sparkman bill for the assistance to cooperative or mutual home ownership groups which do not require the setting up of a separate constituent agency, and which do not partake of the nature of a subsidy. These provisions are contained in Section 213a of Title 1 of the bill. They are essentially the same provisions as those imposed in H. R. 2811 and S. 1249, introduced early in this session by Representative Patman and myself at the instance of the American Legion and other groups representing individuals urgently in need of homes for their own use.

One of the most important of these provisions is the rendering to cooperative groups of the technical planning assistance necessary to qualify projects for mortgage insurance. Another important feature is the provision for direct loans from the Government against insured mortgages, with interest not to exceed 4 per cent and amortization not to exceed 40 years; but such direct loans are authorized only in the event of failure of private investors to make them on equivalent or better terms.

Provision is also made for 100 per cent mortgage insurance for veterans who are participants in cooperative or mutual home ownership groups, on the theory that a 100 per cent guaranteed loan to veterans participating in mutual or cooperative organizations is equally or more justifiable than 100 per cent loads to veterans purchasing individual homes. It is believed that, because of the volume production and merchandising afforded, the veteran would obtain better accommodations for less money. There are no restrictions with respect to incomes of participants in the cooperative or mutual organizations contemplated, but limitations are placed upon the cost of the housing units, as is the case with other FHA insurance.

As you state in your editorial, we have had only meager experience in this country with cooperative housing. It can be stated, however, that, as a general rule, where sound planning has been provided and improper exploitation eliminated, cooperative housing enterprises in this country have been outstandingly successful. This is notably true in the case of the mutual home ownership pattern project constructed by the Federal Works Agency in 1941 and 1942. The actual operating experience of these projects gives good reason to believe that comfortable homes in desirable surroundings can be obtained by the great majority of American families at a cost within their income, without Government subsidy and with a maximum of security of tenure.

It is hoped that under the provisions of Section 213a the principles which have been demonstrated to be so successful in the construction and operation of these pattern projects can be utilized in a greatly expanded program which will make good homes available to a substantial portion of our population—especially veterans and their families.

The Government has tried out a great many plans to arrive at this result, but we must acknowledge that these plans have been largely ineffective. We should, by all means, give the mutual home ownership program, with its background of successful operation of pattern projects, a thorough and fair trial. If this program should fail, then it will be necessary for us to consider most seriously the direct loan and other subsidy features contained in Title 3 of the Sparkman bill.

Washington Calling

Overseas Airlines

WITH THE tourist season at its height, every hour of the day and night the big planes are taking off for Europe, most of them filled to capacity. This is a brand-new business that was scarcely beyond the experimental stage 10 years ago.

To those who say that private enterprise is dead this thriving industry is a refutation. If any one individual can be singled out as the pioneer of America's far-flung system of overseas airlines it is Juan Trippe, head of Pan American World Airways. For 25 years Trippe's driving genius has sent American flag airlines to the far corners of the earth.

Today Trippe stands at what may well be a major turning point in his career. In the midst of a long bureaucratic contest over whether he shall be allowed to buy out the rival American Overseas Airlines, he has been charged with seeking to drive out all opposition.

Trippe, who has promoted powerful political friends in Washington, has long championed the "chosen instrument" theory of foreign air operation with the argument that only a single coordinated American line can meet the competition of foreign-owned companies. If the Republicans had won in November, Pan American's good friend, Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, was prepared to push through Congress his bill authorizing the "chosen instrument."

What he could not do by direct political action, Trippe is now trying to do by financial manipulation, according to the charge in the brief filed by Public Counsel James L. Highsaw, jr., and William F. Kennedy of the Civil Aeronautics Board. If the CAB approves Pan America's application to buy American Overseas Airlines, that will be merely the first step toward consolidation, according to the brief.

AFTER the merger the only competitor left on the North Atlantic route would be Trans-World Airlines. The withdrawal of TWA, the brief suggests, "could be brought about either by competitive pressure applied by Pan American or by TWA's own financial difficulties or by a combination of both factors."

Opposition to a merger that might result in a single American line operating abroad is based not merely on the need to keep up competition so that rates and service will be responsive to the demands of the traveling public. A monopoly airline, according to the brief, would have powers greater than that of the Government of the United States. In both foreign policy and defense it could dictate its own terms.

To support this claim the CAB's public counsel introduced into the Pan American hearings a series of letters from E. Balluder, a Pan American executive. The letters, written in 1942, show, according to the brief, that "When this country faced one of the gravest crises in its history, Pan American was withholding full information as to its resources of men and equipment for fear that it would be required by the Government to utilize the men and equipment in a manner it didn't like." The brief declares:

"These letters and the other evidence in this record warn us that to allow Pan American to have a monopoly of all American-flag operations abroad would be to create a dual sovereignty dealing at arm's length with the Government of the United States and defying that Government from time to time when it suited its interest to do so."

PAN AMERICAN'S attorneys ridicule these charges. Trippe in his testimony argued that merger of the two lines would effect a saving of nine million dollars a year. Such savings are imperative in the face of competition from foreign lines. CAB counsel challenged this argument with the statement "that it is contrary to all experience to suppose that a step in the direction of monopoly will in the long run result in any savings at all."

One of the unhappy aspects of the contest is the way in which, under the regulatory system, it is drawn out. The board must consider the mountain of material submitted in the prolonged hearings. Then after the board either approves or disapproves the application, the ruling may be appealed to the President, who has final authority to pass on major decisions covering operations overseas. Since the President must call on all interested departments—State, Defense, etc.—the final decision is months away.

In my opinion, the case for a "natural" monopoly or an "inevitable" monopoly—even a "benevolent" monopoly—is always doubtful. Competition has been a powerful spur behind the development of airways that span the globe.

The foreign pattern, and without American competitiveness it would be likely to prevail in the air, is one of cartel agreements decisive on price and service. Even in the face of the kind of costly technology represented by the Boeing Stratocruiser, which only a few companies can afford, the argument for competition remains a powerful one.

Matter Of Fact

The President And The General

"Well, Harry, I guess you're it," said Senator Truman. "Senator, I've got just three bucks left in the bank," replied Harry Vaughan, "but if you say I'm it, I guess I'm it."

This slice of dialogue (said to be verbatim—at least it sounds like the two men) took place during the climactic moment in the personal relationship between President Harry Truman and Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan. To understand this relationship is to understend something, not only about President Truman and his unhappy military aide, but about the whole flavor of this Administration.

The dialogue took place in 1940, when Truman, then a Senator, was making a bid for another Senate term. As on a later occasion, no one gave Truman a ghost of a chance. The Pendergast investigation had cast no reflection whatsoever on Truman's personal integrity, but as an organization man, Truman was inevitably tarred with the Pendergast brush.

Moreover, one of his opponents for the Missouri Democratic nomination was United States District Attorney Maurice Milligan, the man who had put Truman's old friend, Tom Pendergast, in jail. Milligan was popular in Missouri, and so was Truman's other opponent, Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, who had a strong organization.

With such opposition to buck, it was unanimously agreed that Truman would run a bad third. Thus, inevitably, to work for Truman seemed a waste of time, and to contribute to his campaign a waste of money. Truman himself was flat broke—he has never had any personal fortune. He did not even have the funds to buy stamps and stationery. He asked half a dozen rich friends to head his finance committee, and with one excuse or another they all turned him down.

IT WAS then that Truman, in this crisis in his career, turned in desperation to Harry Vaughan, his old National Guard and American Legion pal, and the dialogue quoted above took place. The two men had known each other since the First World War. But until 1940 the friendship had been casual, the friendship of the joke and the backslap and the occasional highball. Vaughan was the kind of half-friend, half-hanger-on most politicians collect in their retinue.

Vaughan went to work with busy, back-slapping energy. Soon he had wangled a $5000 loan from a rich Democrat (the loan has since been repaid in full). This, and other money Vaughan collected, enabled Truman to put on a real fighting campaign. Milligan and Stark killed each other off in the race, and Truman squeaked by to win the nomination. The election was easy, and the road which eventually led to the White House lay open.

The story since this turning point in the lives of the two men is well known. Vaughan became, no longer a mere casual backslapping pal, but one of the Truman circle (as did James K. Vardaman, who also stood by Truman in the dark days in 1940). Truman made Vaughan his secretary in the Senate, and Vaughan has had his appointed place on Truman's coattails ever since. Vaughan undoubtedly has a sort of canine loyalty for his benefactor, and Truman is said to have an irritable affection for Vaughan, something like a father with a disappointing son.

ALL THIS would be a rather affecting story of loyalty given and loyalty returned, were it not for two facts; the fact that Vaughan is the kind of a man he is, and the fact that Truman is now President of the United States. Vaughan made a perfectly adequate Senator's secretary. A Senator's Secretary's job generally consists largely of doing, in the Senator's name, little favors for his constituents—a telephone call to the right man here, an introduction there, a little pressure conveniently applied in the right place.

A genial dunderhead, with a big name to use as a stick to beat the bureaucrats, can do this sort of thing. And this is very much the sort of thing which, on the larger scale his position has permitted, General Vaughan has apparently been doing. Comparisons between the present mess and the Teapot Dome scandal are wholly misleading—there is no sort of evidence of personal corruption. Rather there has been the sort of petty fixing and finagling which a Senator's secretary, who was a busybody with a liking for intrigue, might undertake to do on his own.

The trouble is that Harry Truman is no longer a Senator. Petty fixing is only a trifle squalid when it originates on Capitol Hill. But when it bears a White House stamp it has a downright ugly smell, even though it may be motivated by mere inflated ego, even though the President may know nothing about it.

Moreover, the trouble goes deeper than this. These are not times when dunderheads, however loyal, however genial, can be tolerated near the sources of power. Those who know him affirm that Truman would never for a moment tolerate the slightest taint of personal corruption in those near him. It is past time for the President to adopt the same intolerant attitude to what may seem to him mere harmless stupidity. For stupidity in the White House can be in the end at least as dangerous as corruption. And more and more since the election this Administration is taking its flavor from men, however loyal, however genial, with second-rate brains.

House Slashes Arms Funds

ment itself cut only $75,356,000 cash from the bill.

The same forces supporting it, however, lined up to knock out of the bill an authorization for $505,150,000 in contract authority, chargeable to next year's budget. This had been inserted in the hope it might overcome some opposition to the full cash outlay coming at one time.

The vote eliminating the contract authority was 123 to 73, on a division.

Bonner Provision Approved

Only one other important change was made in the bill, an amendment by Representative Bonner (D., N. C.) requiring that at least 50 per cent of all weapons be transported in United States merchant vessels, at their market rates.

A similar provision is carried in the Economic Cooperation Administration legislation.

Vorys, who joined Administration spokesmen in opposing this, clashed with Bonner when Vorys declared, "I'm getting tired of bills for other purposes being made a sort of WPA for the Merchant Marine."

There was some consolation for the Administration in the defeat of an amendment by Representative John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.) seeking to add 100 million dollars to the bill; 75 million dollars for China, and the balance in arms aid to "other areas in southeast Asia."

Supported by Roosevelt

This proposal, defeated 164 to 92, gained such supporters as Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.—who supported the full arms bill—because it did not specify aid to Nationalist China.

Lodge told the House it could be used at the discretion of the President to aid any Chinese groups ready to fight Communism, and reactivation of the "Flying Tigers" and aid to Chinese warlords was suggested.

Young Roosevelt told reporters: "It's an option to spend it if we wish to spend it the right way as we did in Greece and Turkey."

The Administration had a narrow escape on one portion of the bill which it regards as a key section—authority to provide 155 million dollars worth of raw materials to Western Europe, for arms production overseas.

Sees Adverse Effect

Vorys sought to eliminate it, declaring: "It seems to me that this is not the time to start up arms factories overseas subject to sabotage or capture." Additional arms manufacture abroad, he stated, would also adversely affect European recovery.

Representative Ribicoff (D., Conn.) argued that the 155 million dollars "leads to production of 750 million dollars worth of goods" for defense overseas. "By voting for this (Vorys) amendment you are saddling the American taxpayer with 750 million dollars," he said.

The amendment was defeated 123 to 107. Senators Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Dulles (R., N. Y.) hav eannounced they oppose the 155-million-dollar expenditure and are expected to make a strong fight to eliminate it in the Senate.

Among other amendments defeated in the House were:

A proposal by Representative Battle (D., Ala.) to cut a flat 100 million dollars off the western European fund. Defeated on voice vote.

A 234 million dollar cut in the of that program to March 31 so European outlay and limitation Congress can then review it. Proposed by Representative Javits (R., N. Y.) and rejected 178 to 5.

An amendment by Representative Keating (R., N. Y.) to cut the European program i nhalf, and pay for it out of National military appropriations. Defeated 181 to 79.

Authority for the President to negotiate for European air bases, proposed by Representative Donald L. Jackson (R., Calif.) and rejected 80 to 40 after arguments that such power already exists.

A combined amendment to withhold aid from Great Britain as long as Ireland is kepe partitioned (proposed by Representaive Rooney (D., N. Y.) and as long as she maintains a socialist government (proposed by Representative Boyd Tackett (D., Ark). Rejected 103 to 66.

Banning the use of United States military personnel overseas, to furnish technical assistance in connection with the arms plan. Proposed by Representative John B. Williams (D., Miss.) and defeated on voice vote.

In hearings before the joint Senate Foreign Relations-Armed Services Committee yesterday, the arms program was attacked by Dr. H. M. Griffith, vice president of the National Economic Council, as "one more blunder added to a series of disastrous blunders" in foreign policy.

SeymourLindfield, executive director of the Young Progressives of America, said the bill means sending "young Americans to Europe to keep tottering governments in power."

Frazer A. Bailey, president of the National Federation of American Shipping, Inc., urged adoption of the 50-50 guarantee of use of American shipping to transport arms.

Today, Henry A. Wallace is scheduled to testify before the Senate committee.

such statements to the White House aide.

Albert J. Gross, Milwaukee manufacturer, who made and shipped out the seven freezers, was asked if they were classified as rejects.

"We had no such animal," Gross replied.

General Vaughan, in a statement issued at the White House Saturday, said it was Hoffman who told him that the freezers were rejects or experimental models and "did not have commercial market value."

Hoffman, in the testimony released yesterday, was asked questions that appeared to bear on this last point.

"Did General Vaughan know who was paying for the freezers?" Senator McCarthy asked.

"Yes," said Hoffman.

"He did. Did he ever offer to make payment?"

"I do not know."

"At least he never did to you?"

"Not to me."

Hoffman related how he, Maragon and Emmett King, a New York attorney, flew to Eu ope in 1945 in the interests of Verley Co. business.

"Where did you travel in Europe?" Hoffman was asked.

"Just went to Paris," he said, "and from Paris to London, and returning home."

"How did you travel over?"

"Air Transport Command."

"Who made the arrangements with the ATC?"

"Mr. Maragon."

'Did you have any difficulty getting on ATC at that time?"

"I was not aware of any."

"Was it not very scarce as a commodity at that point in the war to travel to Europe?"

"I do not know; I was not familiar enough."

Hoffman said he had no difficulty with passports, either.

Senator Mundt (R., S. D.) kept asking during the closed session "why" it was that the head of the Verley perfume firm, Mr. Bennett, would want to make a gift of deep-freeze units to Gen. Vaughn. He thought he saw a connection between the gift and the trip which Hoffman, Maragon, and King made to Europe two months after VE-Day.

Mundt said he knew something about the extreme difficulty that American businessmen had at that time in trying to get to Paris, because he tried to put several in contact with the State Department only to have them curtly turned down.

He said he also knew how difficult it was to get the Army's Air Transport Command to take businessmen to Europe so soon after t' shooting.

Then, turning to Hoffman, Mundt said:

"It seems to me that the mystery is gradually clarifying itself in my mind, and that you acted with considerable wisdom, perhaps, in suggesting to Mr. Bennett that it would not be a bad idea to drop a deep freeze into Harry Vaughan's possession because if anybody could fix it up for you to go to Europe it would be Harry Vaughan."

Mundt said that there was "nothing particularly crooked" about it, but he thought there had to be a motive for Bennet's actions.

"That is about what took place," he said to Hoffman, "and you know it and I know it.'

"Well, I never talked to General Vaughan about getting any help for getting into Europe," said Hoffman.

"I am sure that conversation was with Mr. Maragon, I am positive about that," said Mundt.

The first witness at Monday's executive session, the transcript showed, was Gross, the Milwaukee manufacturer. He told how Hoffman ordered the deep-freeze units for General Vaughan and his friends, and told how the machines had gone out in two batches.

The first two were sent out on June 12, 1945, one to Mrs. Harry S. Truman at 219 Delaware st., Independence, Mo., and the other to General Vaughan at his home in Alexandria.

In July of that same year, freezers were sent to J. K. Vardaman, then White House naval aide and now a member of the Federal Reserve Board, and to Matthew J. Connelly, White House secretary.

These models, Gross testified, sold at $390 each.

In the winter of 1945-46, three improved models which retailed at $520 were sent to General Vaughan, Fred M. Vinson, then Secretary of the Treasury and now Chief Justice, and John W. Snyder, then Director of Reconversion and Mobilization and now Secretary of the Treasury.

One of these General Vaughan had installed in the White House lunch room used by the staff.

Bennett, who paid for all the freezers, was granted a discount on the last three.

Hoffman, at the outset of his testimony, gave the background of the deep-freeze incident.

"I was in General Vaughan's office," he said, "and I happened to overhear a telephone conversation of General Vaughan and somebody else, discussing the matter of a deep-freeze unit that was needed at Independence, Mo. They were trying to locate something that would serve that purpose. In fact, they were trying to get a Coca Cola freezer somewhere and I mentioned to General Vaughan the fact that I had seen a freezer on display in the window of a small shop in a little community I live in, right outside of Milwaukee. . . .

"Later in the day I phoned Mr. Bennett, who is president of Albert Verley and Co. We are the advertising agency for Albert Verley, and have been since 1933."

He said he told Bennett about the conversation he overheard in Vaughan's office, and quoted Bennett as saying: "Well, I will be glad to ship one down there."

He said that later, after the freezer had gone to Independence, Bennett said: "I would also like to ship some to a number of other Administration leaders whom I like and admire."

"I think you should know something about Mr. Bennett, perhaps. . . . He has always been a very wealthy man, a very prosperous man. He has always had big cars and chauffeurs, and big apartments.

"He has had yachts, and he has always had an extremely profitable business, and he is . . . one of these fellows to whom gifts like that just do not mean anything.

"He sent these freezers without the knowledge of the people who received them, and I am sure that in most cases they probably were completely surprised to get them, but he just wanted to do it."

"Did you tell General Vaughan that these were rejects or experimental models?" Hoffman was asked.

"No," he said.

He explained further on that General Vaughan was an old friend.

"I have known him for, oh, maybe 15 years," he said. "You see, he lived in Milwaukee for quite a number of years. I knew him in Milwaukee. I knew him when he lived in St. Louis, and I saw a good deal of him. In fact, he was instrumental in bringing the then Senator Truman to Milwaukee to address the Milwaukee Advertising Club when I was chairman of the program committee. That was in either 1943 or 1944, somewhere in that period . . ."

Senator Mundt wanted to know why a perfume maker would want to give General Vaughan a deep freezer.

"Well," said Hoffman, "Mr. Bennett, of course, was a friend of General Vaughan's also. . . I had introduced Mr. Bennett to General Vaughan some years prior to that, and he knew him pretty well . . ."

Hoffman, asked about Maragon, said the gift of deep freezers occurred before Maragon was hired by Bennett.

He was asked about the trip he, Maragon and Attorney King took to Europe.

What was the purpose of the trip?" Committee Counsel William P. Rogers asked.

"Well," said Hoffman, "Mr. Bennett had gone to Europe earlier that year. He does a large business in essential oils which are made in France and other countries in Europe. He had always represented a very large company known as LeMane Fils. They make natural essential oils like jasmine, and rose, and things of that nature, and he went back there to reestablish his connections with that company and also to attempt to get contracts representing manufacturers of finished perfumes in this country for his clients.

"You see, they make no finished perfumes, and while he was over in France he became ill. When he finally got back to this country he did not feel well enough to go back again, and he asked me to go and try to complete some of those contracts."

Hoffman, asked about Maragon, said that he had been assigned by Bennett to represent him "in contacts abroad for the purchase and the sale of raw materials used in his business." It was Maragon's job, he added, to buy essential oils used in the manufacture of perfume.

Hoffman said he took along $10,000 in cash anad $50,000 in the form of a letter of credit. He said his companions had their own expense money.

The $10,000, he said, was exausted, but he used only $2000 of the letter of credit.

Asked about his passport, Hoffman said he had no difficulty in getting it.

"I recall going over to Ruth Shipley's office," he said, "and I answered all of the questions that were asked on the passport application."

Then came the question that brought out how Maragon made the arrangements for flying over on a plane of the Air Transport Command. Hoffman said that the fare was paid in cash.

He was questioned at some length about a container of oil which Maragon purchased in Paris for Bennett, and about Maragon's trouble with this at the Customs office in New York.

"He (Maragon) did not tell you that on the declaration he declared this essential oil as four bottles of champagne did he?" Counsel Rogers asked.

"No."

"Then he did not tell you later on that when they asked him about this he said that these bottles of champagne were for Mr. George Drescher of the White House did he?" (Drescher was then chief of the White House Secret Service detail.)

Hoffman said that Maragon did not tell him this, and he added that he did not know about a fine being imposed on Maragon until about a year later.

He said he was told by Bennett, who was "quite upset about it." Hoffman added:

"I believe Mr. Bennett said, 'The damn fool, the stuff could have come in duty free anyway.'"

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) asked Hoffman if he or Bennet expected anything in exchange for the deep freezers.

"Not at all," said Hoffman. "Actually, it does not sound true, but he (Bennett) is just that kind of a free-handed individual. He just wanted to do it. I think he got quite a kick out of the fact that he was pretty close to some very important people, so that he could give them a gift of this nature."

Hoffman went on to say that many people send gifts to the President without expecting any consideration or any favors. In Bennett's case, he said, a gift of deep freezers was, proportionately, was about a small as a gift of a box of Wisconsin cheese would be in his own case.

Counsel Rogers said, apropos of Bennet and favors, that Maragon apparently had been extended quite a lot of consideration in view of the fact that he called a container of oil "four bottles of champagne."

Rogers quoted from a letter from the Supervisor of Customs, which said of Maragon:

"When the passenger submitted his baggage the inspector noticed that one package was addressed to a Miss Truman and one addressed to Mr. George Drescher, White House, Washington, D. C. The inspector, in the presence of a custom examiner, V. C. Schugg, interrogated the passenger concerning the ownership content of these packages, and was informed by the passenger that they were gifts sent by the embassy."

Rogers said there was no prosecution of the case and no confiscation of property.

"The law says," Rogers continued, "that the property is supposed to be confiscated, and it looks to me on the surface as though they caught Maragon redhanded smuggling the stuff in, and there was no prosecution."

He said, in answer to a question, that he was referring to the container of essential oils.

Hoffman said the Bennett would never have countenanced Maragon's doing any thing like that—"anything shady, under-handed or unscrupulous."

Senator McCarthy pointed out that Bennett continued to hire Maragon after he knew about the "attempted smuggling."

"He . . . kept him on his payroll, (and) paid him a thousand a month," said McCarthy.

There was a discussion of what the Senators seemed to think were three significant dates: June 28, 1945, when a freezer was shipped to Mrs. Truman in Independence; July 17 or 18, when Hoffman, Maragon and King flew to Paris, and July 31, when Maragon made his disputed declaration to the Customs people.

Senator Mundt began trying to link Bennett's gift of deep freezers to Vaughan with the trip to Europe.

After saying that Vaughan could "fix up" the trip if anybody could, Mundt said to Hoffman:

"You are a pretty astute young man to be in the advertising business, and you recognize the chain reaction in that type of process, and it would not do any injury to your desire to go over to Paris quickly when all American businessmen were trying to do the same thing, and you would say that this is not going to hurt anybody to have a good friend at court.

"That is about what your mental reaction was: 'I am going to call up Mr. Bennett and say maybe they can send an ice box.'"

Hoffman said he would be willing to declare under oath no such thing entered his mind.

"You know something of his (Vaughan's) potency, that is right."

"No," said Hoffman, "I mean . . ."

Mundt broke in to say:

"I am sure you did, and you knew—you see, before you had mentioned the iceboxes—that your boss wanted to have some representative to go to Paris. It would be extremely desirable from a strictly businessman's standpoint to get there.

"Businessmen all over the country were being denied the right to go. None of them were being accorded the right to go in a Government plane, ATC; somebody had to sort of grease the skids if you were going to be among the selected few who went, and General Vaughan had demonstrated himself to be a pretty good skidgreaser, and so, it was conceived by you, 'I will call up Bennett and say, "Here is a little favor we can do this fellow. It is perfectly legitimate, perfectly all right. It is a gift of an ice box. You have the money and you are in the habit of giving gifts. It will not do any harm to give him an ice box,"' and the subsequent evolvement of history demonstrated your judgment at the time."

Hoffman insisted that he did not suggest that Mr. Bennet give an ice box to General Vaughan. He said that was Bennett's own suggestion.

Mundt said that Hoffman had some reason for telephoning Bennett, and added:

"I mean naivete does not flourish to that extent in Wisconsin."

Mundt persisted in trying to find significance in the fact that Maragon, Hoffman and King could get to Paris on an ATC plane "at a time when that was just impossible for private citizens to do."

"Somebody," he said, "had to exert a colossal amount of influence in high circles to make that circumstance come true."

"Who made those very tortuous and difficult arrangements to facilitate your entry into Paris almost on the heels of Eisenhower?" Mundt asked Hoffman.

"Mr. Maragon made all arrangements in Washington."

That appeared to indicate that Maragon not only arranged for the ATC plane, but for the passports as well, although Hoffman didn't say so specifically.

"And he made (the arrangements) as a representative of Mr. Bennett?" Mundt asked.

"That is correct," said Hoffman.

"All right," said Mundt. "That is what I wanted to find out.

At one stage, Hoffman was asked how he met James V. Hunt, big-fee management counselor and central figure in the 5-percent inquiry, who has been represented as saying that he was "one of General Vaughan's closest friends."

Hoffman said he met Hunt when the latter was a special consultant with the War Assets Administration. He said that at the time a network of advertising agencies with which his firm was connected was trying to get some WAA advertising.

President Truman, at his White House news conference yesterday morning, had a statement ready for the reporters:

"At the outset," he read, "I want to say to you that I do not intend to answer any questions pertaining to testimony that has been given before Senaor Hoey's committee.

"General Vaughan has already has said he would go before the committee and make a full statement on all matters with which his name has been connected, and I suggest, as has the chairman of the committee, that you gentlemen—and your editors—in common fairness suspend judgment on General Vaughan until he has been heard by the committee."

Mr. Truman read the statement again, this time more slowly so that the reporters could take it down. When he had read the line about not answering questions pertaining to testimony given before the Senate subcommittee, he interpolated this remark:

"The principal reason for that is that all these . . . committee hearings have been behind closed doors and everything that has come out has been leaks."

When Mr. Truman came to the part about General Vaughan making a full statement, he made another interpolation:

"That will be a field day," he said. "That won't be behind closed doors, you can rest assured on that."

"Mr. President," said a reporter, "my I ask one question? Did I understand you to say the testimony had only been in closed sessions? There has been an open session . . ."

"That is what I have been informed," Mr. Truman interjected.

General Vaughan was standing directly in back of Mr. Truman.

When word of Mr. Truman's remarks reached Capitol Hill, Senators engaged in the 5-percent inquiry expressed amazement. A call was put in for Senator Hoey, who had gone to North Carolina to make some speeches.

Hoey agreed with the other members to make public all the testimony taken down at Monday's executive session. In a statement dictated over the telephone, he disclosed that a representative of General Vaughan had informed a member of the committee staff on Wednesday that Vaughan would like to have a transcript of the testimony. The subcommittee, it was said, offered Vaughan the testimony provided that it be released to the public at the same time.

"General Vaughan's representative," the Hoey statement said, "informed us that the general did not desire the subcommittee to release the testimony in question."

Senator Hoey concluded his statement as follows:

"The committee has attempted at all times to be fair to all concerned. It regrets that this effort to be scrupulously fair in this instance may have appeared to be an attempt to withhold testimony.

"Under the circumstances in order to remove any idea of possible unfairness it has been unanimously agreed by the subcommittee that this testimony now be made public.

"In closing I wish to state what I have previously said repeatedly, that the public should reserve its judgment as to all parties concerned until they have had an opportunity to be heard and all the facts presented."

Col. Nevitt, Guard Feud Figure, Loses Army Status

Adjutant General's Relief Asked by Abendroth; Keeps D. C. Service Rank

Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, whose relief as District National Guard adjutant general was requested by Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth, new Guard commander, will be separated from active Army duty today, he learned yesterday.

The 55-year-old officer, whose well-publicized feud with Col. Leroy S. Mann, senior line officer, over precedence last year became known as the "Battle of the Colonels," will presumably retain his present rank in the Guard, but otherwise will become a civilian.

Colonel Nevitt was notified of his orders yesterday by General Abendroth's aide, who informed him they were in the mail and read a copy of them. They ordered the colonel to report to Fort Myer (Va.) today for separation from active duty.

Jerry Klutz is on vacation. His column, the Federal Diary, will be resumed next Tuesday.

A member of the local Guard since 1912, either as a civilian, enlisted man or officer on Army duty, he said last night he did not know what he would do in civilian life.

"Battle of One Colonel"

If his transfer to inactive status was due to the so-called Battle of the Colonels, he said, "as far as I'm concerned, it was a battle of only one colonel."

"I had no interest in the matter other than compliance with General Cox's orders, and I was merely complying with instructions and policies received from General Cox," he declared. He referred to Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, who retired as Guard commander and was replaced by General Abendroth.

Quarrels in the command of the Guard first became public last year when General Cox was away.

Appeals to the White House and threats of court-martial proceedings were made.

The orders Colonel Nevitt is rereceiving came on the heels of General Abendroth's announcement on Tuesday that he had requested the Department of the Army to relieve his adjutant "not for personal reasons, but as a result of thorough study of the situation" and his belief that Nevitt's departure would serve the best interests of the Guard.

Colonel Nevitt, who has been on active duty as adjutant general since July 1, 1946, declared the local Guard's current status, strength and training efficiency has been attained under his jurisdiction.

50% Over 1941 Strength

The postwar reorganization had not taken place when he became adjutant general, he pointed out, adding that the Guard's present strength is now 50 per cent greater than it was when the unit was called to active duty in 1941.

During his tenure, the outfit was moved from an "office suite in the District Building to the new Armory," he said, "and I helped obtain a hangar and facilities at Andrews Air Force Base for the Air Guard."

A District native, Nevitt began his career as a civilian employe in the D. C. Guard's property office in 1912, served as an enlisted man in the first World War, and enlisted in the Guard in 1918.

From 1923 to 1941, he served as a commissioned officer in the headquarters of the Twenty-ninth Division, D. C. Guard, on inactive status, at the same time holding a civilian job in the Guard as assistant adjutant general.

Called to active service in 1941, he had various posts in the United States until 1944, when he became adjutant general of the Thirteenth Air Force, serving in New Guinea, Morotai and Leyte.

Col. Nevitt, who lives at 1701 Jackson st. ne., is married and has two married daughters.

Marine Dies, Another Hurt As Auto Skids

Two Women Injured In Another Mishap At Bladensburg, Md.

A Quantico Marine sergeant was killed and his companion injured when they were flung from their skidding auto shortly after midnight yesterday on Route 1 about a mile north of Stafford Courthouse, Va.

The driverless car, after smashing into a tree and tossing the pair out, slithered on down the road until a tractor-trailer moving in the same direction slammed into it from behind. The accident occurred about nine miles south of Quantico.

State Trooper John T. Winder identified the dead marine as S/Sergt. Philodor H. Brown, 28, of Holyoke, Mass., attached to the training school at Quantico.

The driver of the auto was said to be Sergt. James W. Moore, jr., who was in the base hospital at Quantico with head cuts.

About the same time two Washington women were injured in another auto-trailer truck collision at Cross st. and Route 50, Bladensburg, Md.

Mrs. Myrna Bennett, 19, of 1367 Irving st. nw., suffered a fractured wrist, and Mrs. Bessie Wialbut, 27, of 1828 Ingleside ter. nw., suffered face cuts and bruises. They were in a car driven by Mrs. Wialbut's husband, Robert, 28. They were admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital.

Wialbut was charged with reckless driving and failing to produce a driver's permit, and was ordered to appear in Hyattsville Police Court August 29.

Police said the driver of the truck was James L. Scheuch, 23, of RFD 1, Hyattsville.

An aged Chevy Chase woman was listed in an Associated Press dispatch as one of two women severely injured Wednesday night in an auto-bus-auto collision on a wet highway five miles from Bridgeport, W. Va.

Mrs. Catherine Nagle, 86, suffered a broken knee, severe body bruises and shock. With her was Mrs. Mabel Wright, 72, of Richmond, Ind., who suffered a broken ankle, severe body bruises and shock. Both were taken to Fairmont, W. Va., Hospital.

Owner Seeks Missing Boat, Down Payment

George C. Winters was dickering to sell his speedboat, Marie Bee, yesterday, but the prospective purchaser apparently forgot to make the down payment before skimming away in it.

Winters, who lives at 1675 Park rd. nw., told police a man known to him only as "Barker" went to the Corinthian Yacht Club about 11 a.m. with his permission to give the boat another lookover before making up his mind about the deal.

Later in the afternoon he discovered that the boat was missing—and "Barker," too.

Two Harbor Police patrol boats were searching nearby waters last night for the boat, which Winters said had only enough fuel aboard for a half hour's cruising. The boat, a 26-footer, has a black painted hull, and is valued by Winters at $2000.

Charges Dismissed; Wife Refuses to Testify

Charges of threats and destroying private property lodged against Ellis M. Heath, 439 Irving st. nw., were dismissed in Municipal Court yesterday when Heath's wife, Mary, refused to testify against him.

Heath faces a jury trial October 6 on assault charges brought by his wife. The man had been accused of threatening his wife and cutting up about $600 worth of her clothing.

By Court Order

Brentwood Council Seats Pantheist

J. Milton Stanford, Pantheist member-elect of Brentwood Town Council, was officially seated last night by order of Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

Stanford, re-elected to the council, June 27, at first was denied his seat because he refused to swear to a belief in the Christian religion. He said Pantheists believe in God in a different, broader sense.

He was officially sworn into office yesterday afternoon in the chambers of Judge Charles C. Marbury, the jurist who ruled in his favor. He took the oath prescribed in the Maryland constitution.

Judge Marbury recently ruled unconstitutional an old Maryland law requiring public officials to swear their belief in Christianity or a hereafter. He ordered that Stanford be seated on the council.

Thought Him a Communist

Mayor James L. Russell, after Stanford had been seated, disclosed that his refusal to take the oath had led many persons in Brentwood to think him a Communist.

"I did ask Stanford if he were a Communist, because that is the common belief," the mayor said. He posed the question, Russell said, when Stanford first told him he could not take the oath.

"He convinced me at that time that he was not a Communist," Mayor Russell declared. He added that the council as a whole is likewise convinced.

Earlier, Stanford told the council he regretted that the whole thing occurred but, he said, "I could do nothing else."

"Let Bygones Be Bygones"

"The proper attitude for us now is to let bygones be bygones," he said.

"If anyone has any idea from what I said that I have any resembance to a Communist living or dead, or that I dont' adhere to moral standards, I want to correct that impression."

He then offered to meet with anyone who had any questions and discuss his personal philosophy.

The meeting opened with Mayor Russell informing the council there were two alternatives before it. He said Judge Marbury had told him either they must seat Stanford or appeal the judge's decision.

Councilman Benjamin Castle moved Stanford be seated and the motion was carried unanimously by the two councilmen present and the mayor. One member, Elbert Brown, was absent.

One Citizen Protests

Only one citizen in the small audience spoke up to protest his seating, H. E. Longley, 4405 37th st., Brentwood. He offered to contribute to the cost of an appeal of Judge Marbury's decision.

Stanford told a reporter he discovered he was a Pantheist when he encountered a definition of Pantheism which accorded with his own beliefs. He said, "I would be perfectly willing not to use the word God at all—it merely designates the "causal relations of the way things came to be."

"Everything that happens is caused," he said. "We are part of infinite being—the eternal series of causes in which you and I participate."

He said he found strong evidence of Pantheism in many organized religions, in the Bible and in Plato. He said he had never made a great study of Pantheism but had his own "notions of the nature of things." He said he studied philosophy at the University of Illinois and encountered the concept of Pantheism there.

Beef Prices Cut Despite Hike in Sight

Rib Roast and Round, Down 6 Cents in Week, Slated for Penny Rise

Rib roast of beef and round steak are featured in several local retail markets at lower prices this week despite an expected increase of one cent a pound for the beef market as a whole next week.

Retailers said the price of 58 cents a pound for rib roast advertised by several chain stores compared with last week's retail cost of 65 cents in most markets. One large chain is featuring round steak at 79 cents, also down 6 cents a pound.

Other changes in retail food prices were confined to minor price adjustments, but a drop of as much as 10 cents a pound in pork prices was predicted by some market men for next week.

On the poultry side, most prices remained about the same, with some stores charging two cents a pound less for fryers than last week. Egg prices generally went up one to two cents last Monday here, though in other localities the rise was sharper.

Peaches are the most plentiful fruit at this time and the Department of Agriculture has asked distributors to feature the product this month to aid growers. The department has estimated this year's crop at 75 million bushels, as compared with 65 million last year.

Peach prices, generally lower than last year's, range from $1.75 a bushel to $4.25, depending on size, color, and flavor.

Hyattsville Told County's Help Limited

The Hyattsville City Council police committee last night was told the county could not assure more police protection than now being provided.

The city council now is considering hiring an eighth man for the Hyattsville police force. Acting Mayor H. W. Spicknall is opposed to increasing the force on the grounds the city is paying $21,000 for county police protection and therefore should not have to hire its own police force.)

Ralph Brown, Prince Georges County police superintendent, told the special meeting of the city council committee last night that shortage of personnel in his organization prevented any assurance of increased protection.

Daniel Wiseman, University of Maryland chief of police, urged the council act one way or another immediately on the hiring of Silas Edward Dennis, jr., 28-year-old Marine veteran and university policeman, so that if Dennis should leave the university force Wiseman could train another before the students arrive on the campus.

The council, which failed to authorize the appointment at its last meeting, will reconsider the question at a special meeting at 8 p. m. today.

Not Seeking Nevada Job, McNayr Says

Montgomery Official Tells of Requesting Information on Post Paying $800 More

Montgomery County Manager Irving G. McNayr last night denied reports he is seeking the post of City Manager of Las Vegas, Nev.

McNayr told a Washington Post reporter he had merely written authorities in the Nevada city asking for information about the job. He received an answer, he said, expressing interest and requesting he send his qualifications.

"I will not make a formal application for the job," he said.

Job Pays $10,800

Mayor E. W. Cragin, of Las Vegas, reached by telephone earlier, said he had received a letter from McNayr August 2 listing some of his qualifications and stating his interest in the job. A reply was sent the Montgomery official three days later, he said, asking him to submit additional qualifications. No reply had been received, he said.

According to the Las Vegas Review-Journal McNayr was one of 16 persons applying for the City Manager post. The job pays $10,800 a year, compared to McNayr's present $10,000.

McNayr denied also that any events in the county had caused him to become dissatisfied with his post.

"I am very happy where I am," he said.

The County Manager was a central figure in a controversy over police procedure earlier this month.

On August 5 he relieved 57-year-old County Police Chief Charles M. Orme from duty following the latter's expressed disapproval of the paring down of scout car crews from two policemen to one. The measure was ordered by the County Council on McNayr's recommendation.

Orme was restored to duty last Saturday after writing a letter of apology to the County Manager.

Ouster Was Sought

This is the second time McNayr's consideration of another post has received public notice. In May, 1948, he was given an ultimatum by Board of Commissioners to decide whether to remain in the county supervisor's position he then held or to accept a job with the New York Port Authority.

In November last year two members of the five-man board unsuccessfully sought his ouster because of his procharter sympathies. This occurred while the Commissioners were serving out a lame-duck term of office before the change-over to the present council government.

McNayr joined the county government in February, 1946, as purchasing agent. In November of the same year he was advanced to county supervisor and last May received permanent appointment as county manager, a post he had held on a temporary basis since last January.

In Falls Church

Here's a Dog Story With A Tag Line

Mrs. Ralph M. Lockhart, who hasn't owned a dog in two years, made a desperate appeal to Falls Church police yesterday for help in stemming a flood of calls from strangers who want her to come and get her dog.

She's received urgent commands at all hours to pick up more than a dozen different Fidoes, says Mrs. Lockhart, since she first moved to 605 Dorchester st., Falls Church, six months ago.

It was all a mystery, she explained, until she stooped to pat a handsome pup last week, and noticed the word "Lockhart" on his rabies tag. Investigation disclosed that a firm of that name is one of numerous drug concerns which manufactures vaccine.

Added to this coincidence is the fact she's the only Lockhart in the Falls Church telephone directory.

What brought Mrs. Lockhart to police, she says, was a call yesterday morning from "a very indignant woman who said my dog had chewed the back out of one of her chickens."

Police, though deeply sympathetic, weren't sure they could do much about the whole thing.

Explosion of Steam Valve Kills Pepco Buzzard's Point Worker

One employe was killed and another injured seriously yesterday afternoon when a float control valve connected to the steam heating system blew up at the Buzzard's Point plant of the Potomac Electric Power Co., at 1st and V sts. sw.

Richard D. White, 32, of 1337 21st st. nw. was pronounced dead at Garfield Hospital. Harold C. Clatterbuck, 29, of 2606 S. Veitch st., Arlington, was admitted to the hospital in "satisfactory" condition.

Initial reports were vague as to the cause of the accident and the injuries of the victims. A company employe said White, an instrument repairman, turned the valve, it failed to operate and blew up.

The casting of the valve—described as the size of a three-gallon bucket—shattered and blasted White. He also was scalded by tremendous steam pressure.

Clatterbuck, a steam operator, was nearby and was said to have suffered severe burns.

Other employes nearby on the mezzanine floor were unable to give details. Plant operations were not halted by the mishap.

Board Accepts Basic Plan On District Play Facilities

Agreement Opens Way for Transfer To District Rule; Pools Are Left Out

The District Recreation Board yesterday moved a step closer to controlling all local play facilities in Washington.

It approved an agreement, reported to have Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug's approval, under which Interior's facilities may be turned over to the District agency—except for swimming pools.

The "basic agreement" must be followed by detailed agreements on each facility, however, a procedure likely to take from weeks to months. In some cases the transfers will await the end of concessions now in effect under Interior agreements with Government Services, Inc.

The pool question was left out of the basic agreement although there still is hope, however slight that Interior may transfer its six pools to the board.

Under the general agreement, all the affected facilities will "be open to use by all people irrespective of their race, creed, color or national origin." All the areas now are nonsegregated. It is the segregation issue which has held up transfer of the pools as well.

The Recreation Board runs many of its own facilities, located on District rather than Federal land, on a segregated basis though it is pledged to a gradual end of all segregation.

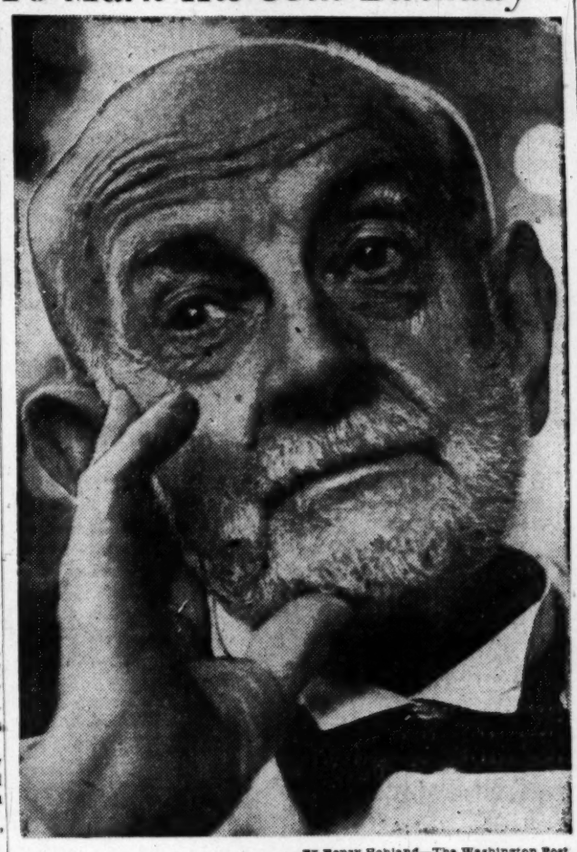
"Basic Agreement"

Group one of the areas listed in the "basic agreement" are facilities already being used by the Recreation Board. Group two includes those where Interior, through concessionaires, has been in charge.

In this second group are the Anacostia, East Potomac, Fort Dupont and Rock Creek Park golf courses, operated by S. G. Loeffler; miniature golf courses at Anacostia and East Potomac, also operated by Loeffler; tennis courts at East Potomac and Rock Creek, Tidal Basin boating, East Potomac Park bicycles, Reflecting Pool ice skating, the Maine ave.-East Potomac Park ferry service, Potomac Clipper sightseeing boat, Hains Point speed boat and Pentagon Lagoon boating, all operated by GSI for Interior.

It is likely that the Recreation Board, to operate uder the specific agreements for each facility, will need a larger appropriation than it would otherwise receive in the 1951 budget. A supplemental estimate probably will be worked up, if the agreements are signed by January 1, for submission to the District Commissioners.

Retired Teacher Writes Poem To Mark His 88th Birthday



By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

W. EDWIN PRIEST

"History is living—make it interesting"

It was 1889 when a young man with some novel ideas about the teaching of history moved into his classroom in old Central High School.

This week, some 43 teaching years and "about 7000" students later, W. Edwin Priest celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday with good health and a clear, vigorous mind.

Physically, the fine-looking bachelor with his short, full beard, is a holdover from the Victorian era which saw his career begin.

To this day, his habitual dress includes black trousers, white "boiled" shirt, black tie, wing collar, and a black alpaca or linen jacket.

His home at 102 W. Thornapple st. in Chevy Chase, Md., carries out the trend. Its corners are filled with classical statuary; its shelves cluttered with the bric-a-brac of an active life.

At Western High School, where he ended teaching in 1932, his classroom was a museum in itself. Statues of Zeus, Apollo, Diana and Bacchus lined its aisles. There were models of Greek temples.

His pupils included such "youngsters" as former Senator Robert LaFollette, and his brother, former Wisconsin Governor Philip. And Hobart M. Corning, now Superintendent of District Schools.

Priest's memory of them, though, is dimmed with time and the thousands of other faces he knew in his classrooms.

Always a man of unbounded interests, Priest is settling on poetry as a hobby in the twilight of his life.

Wednesday, the day he celebrated his birthday, friends took him and his sister driving to Catoctin Mountain in Maryland. Here is the poem Priest wrote to mark the event:

We spent our birthday, driving far;
With eighty-eight behind us.
Nobody saw, nor did we heed;
With not a soul to find us.

High ridges sought we, straight ahead.
We climbed, ascended, winding;
And got there, quite entirely well;
Around the curves, we, winding.

Magnificence of view, beyond;
In absence of a fountain,
Hot milk and coffee drank we there,
Atop Catoctin Mountain.

11 Arraigned As Gamblers, Held for Jury

Eleven persons were held for the grand jury on numbers charges when arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence yesterday.

Five were employes of Kann's department store, including a tailor, an elevator operator and porters. They were held in $1500 bond each on charges of operating a lottery.

They are: Abraham Loube, a tailor, 1216 Hemlock st. nw.; William Albert Mundell, 57, of 1206 D st. ne., elevator operator; Albert Pittman, 43, of 7 New York ave. nw.; Charles Bailey, 50, of 308 50th st. ne., and Booker T. White, 39, of 1909 30th pl. se.

The men were arrested earlier this month after an undercover man, placed in the store, had kept them under observation.

Others arrested elsewhere on charges of operating a lottery and held for the grand jury in $1500 bond were:

Harry D. Grable, 504 Greenwood ave., Takoma Park; Asbury Seldon, 2438 Nichols ave. se.; Wilford A. Grove, 3300 Naylor rd. se.; James E. Irby, 2523 13th st. nw

George Whitney, 1015 N st. nw., and John C. Commings, 2817 14th st. nw., were held in $2000 bond apiece on charges of operating a lottery and setting up a gaming table.

Numbers Raiders Seize 2 in Arlington

Two men were charged yesterday with operating a lottery after Arlington police raided a filling station at 4019 Lee Highway, in the latest of a series of gambling arrests in the county.

Arrested and released in $500 bond each were Harold V. Ramsey, 37, of 1729 Massachusetts ave. se., and Raymond Cullen, 22, of 1707 N. Monroe st., Arlington, operators of the station, according to police.

Detectives John F. Sanders and Russell Runyon said about a dozen numbers slips were confiscated in the raid.

Falls Church Festival to Open Today

The three-day Falls Church Festival, postponed yesterday on account of rain, will open today instead, with a 52-unit parade leaving at 6:30 p. m. from Broad and Spring streets.

Official opening ceremonies, with Milo Christiansen, the District's superintendent of recreation, as guest speaker, will begin at 8 p. m. on the Festival grounds at Hillwood ave., opposite the Falls Church high school.

The three-day program will be extended through Sunday, due to yesterday's weather. The program, much of which has ben rescheduled, includes:

Today

Grounds open 7 p. m. to 11 p. m. At 7 p. m., Navy School of Music Band Concert; 8:30 p. m., exhibition drill by Fort McNair units; 8:50 p. m., first of three semi-finals in the redhead contest; 9 p. m., "The Dyspeptic Ogre," by the Falls Church Community Theater; 9:15 p. m., greased pig contest; 9:30 to 11 p. m., free public dancing to Washington Boys Club orchestra.

'Mayor' Neely May Take Over Next Week

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), 74-year-old political fireball, probably will take over officially as Washington's new "mayor" within the next week.

He is slated to become Chairman of the Senate District Committee, succeeding Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) whom the Senate yesterday unanimously confirmed as Attorney General.

Change of command in the District Committee must first be formally voted by the Senate Committee on Committees, Neely's appointment, however, is considered automatic.

Next to Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), Neely has seniority on the Democratic side of the local committee. Johnston has announced that he will not give up chairmanship of the Postoffice and Civil Service Committee to head the District group.

Senator McGrath has not yet disclosed when he will resign from the Senate. He probably will not until he confers next week with Attorney General Tom Clark who moves up to the Supreme Court.

Life Expectancy Up 3 Years in Decade

The average life expectancy of persons born in United States jumped another three years within the past decade, it was disclosed yesterday.

Latest available figures released by the National Office of Vital Statistics, United States Public Health Service, give the child born today a life expectancy of 66.8 years, in comparison to the 1939-41 expectancy level of 63.6.

The new computations are based on 1947 death rates, and show a slightly higher life expectancy than the 1946 figures. In 1946, white women, who have the firmest grip on life, had exceeded for the first time the biblical age of three score and ten with a life expectancy of 70.3 years. Newest computations have increased this to 70.6. In 1939-41 the figure was 67.29 years.

Latest computations for the white man's life expectancy is 65.2 years, an increase over the 1946 rate of 65.1 years and the 1939-41 level of 62.8 years. The non-white population has shown a consistently lower but steadily increasing life expectancy, according to the statistics.

The expectation of life at birth has steadily increased since 1900 and is credited largely to control of infectious diseases, particularly those of infancy and childhood.

Births in 1949 Exceed 6-Month Total in 1948

More babies were born in the United States during the first half of this year than in the corresponding six months of last year, Federal statisticians reported yesterday.

In round numbers, the newborn totaled 1,706,000, in comparison with 1,694,000 born between January 1 and July 1 of 1948.

Sole year when the baby crop for the first six months exceeded this year's output was 1947, when the total was 1,865,881.

March, the statistics revealed, continued as the record month for income tax exemptions, with 302,000 live births. Second biggest month this year was January, with 291,000 births.

To Teach GIs

Maryland U. May Expand Into Europe

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 18 (AP). The University of Maryland may open a branch school in Europe—to help Army and Air Force men continue their education while in the service.

Dr. George J. Kabat of the university is in Germany consulting with military men on the possibilities of such a program.

The idea would be to send four professors to Europe to teach GIs political science, speech, history and sociology.

The Army and Air Force now maintain 119 education centers in Europe with an enrollment of 21,000. But most of the emphasis now is on primary through high school courses.

The Army wants to put more emphasis on college-level teaching, and Dr. Kabat is making a survey with that end in mind.

The college-level program may start in November or January if military chiefs believe such a plan is feasible.

Dr. Kabat is dean of the university's college of special and continuation studies.

'Anti-Polio' Plan Gets Youth, 20, In Jam With U. S.

The Food and Drug Administration here yesterday marked as closed its investigation of a 20-year-old Brooklyn youth, his anti-polio formula, and his dreams of wealth.

The drug sleuths entered the case Monday on information the youth was trying to run newspaper ads asking prepayment of $4.95 for "an amazing new formula . . . not harmful to either adults or children" to prevent infantile paralysis.

He agreed to cease and desist after confessing that his "formula" was a hand-pencilled list of standard polio precautions, like "Don't leave the garbage can uncovered."

STRANGE EATING HABIT—Claude Garver points to the desk in his Hyattsville home from which he said his 4-year-old daughter, Claudette, gnawed the painted finish. The child is dead of lead poisoning and officials are investigating. Mrs. Garver is holding Elizabeth, 3, who was taken to Children's Hospital yesterday after following Claudette's habit. The other children are Esther, 8 (left), and John, 19 months, held by his father.

Paint Victim's Sister Found To Have Lead Poisoning Too

Three-year-old Elizabeth Garver, whose sister died Saturday after more than a year of chewing painted furniture in her Hyattsville home, was taken to Children's Hospital in Washington yesterday afternoon, also suffering from lead poisoning.

The girl was given a checkup and was admitted as a patient after traces of lead were found in her system.

Earlier yesterday, the body of her 4-year-old sister, Claudette, was found to contain 10 times the normal amount of lead in an analysis by the National Institutes of Health. The study showed lead even in her spinal fluid.

Tried to Stop Her

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claude G. Carver, 4503 Decatur st., said the child chewed furniture and kindling wood despite their efforts to stop her.

Prince Georges County Health Officer Dr. Thomas W. Englar, who inspected the Garver house yesterday, said he had assigned a nurse to the home "to protect and help the other children in this family."

The Garvers told police Elizabeth also chewed painted furniture, but that their two other children "never did."

Dr. Englar said the Garver children looked to him like "little blond cherubs." But, he added, "even a plump child is not necessarily properly fed . . . hidden hunger may be at the root of such strange cravings and such outlandish ways of satisfying them."

Chewed Like Gum

One desk in the Garver home was almost completely free from paint and a top layer of wood where the child had chewed. Bannister legs and porch railings also bore the tooth marks of the two children. He father said the two children apparently chewed the wood like gum, absorbed the taste from it and then spat it out.

A new Maryland law, passed by the last Legislature, prohibits sale or baby furniture not covered with a harmless vegetable paint instead of lead paint.

Medical Advice Sought

The Garvers told county health authorities they had asked medical advice about their two children.

"We used to whip her, but she would still chew. She used to eat well, but after dinner she would go pick up some kindling wood and chew on that. One doctor told us to let her chew sassafras root, but she wouldn't touch that," they said.

Garver said he had removed the desk from the house when it was covered with teeth marks.

"Then, she started on the porch railings and banisters."

Falls Church To Run Center Like Business

The Falls Church Recreation Commission has appointed a three-man committee to put affairs of the city's Teen Canteen youth center on Hillwood ave. "on a business basis."

The action was taken late Wednesday night following a heated joint session of the Recreation Commission and the board of trustees of the canteen.

Criticisms of some aspects of canteen operation had been voiced earlier by commission members who noted there was no definite outline of the director's duties.

Members of the committee include two recreation commissioners, John W. Koone and Mrs. Charles B. Walker, plus Canteen Trustee Lytton Gibson.

Committee Chairman Koons said his group would meet with the teen-age council of the canteen next Wednesday to begin investigating its "whole operation."

The commission has voted down a suggestion by member Samuel McCrary that the canteen's director, Miss Frances Mayze, be given the job of city recreation director. McCrary said he made the motion because "we're paying a recreation director $3600 a year . . . and there isn't a full-time job being done here."

Funds for the canteen building and equipment were raised last year in a public drive. The city council this year approved a $4000 appropriation for the youth center, including salary of its fulltime director.

Dr. Vaughan is a former senior geologist of the Geological Survey and in recent years has been connected with the National Museum here.

Samuel Green, Klan Wizard, Drops Dead

Atlanta, Aug. 18—Dr. Samuel Green, Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, dropped dead today.

The head of the Klan was stricken with a heart attack while working in his yard.

A member of the Klan since 1918, Dr. Green, a graduate of the Electric Medical College of Atlanta in 1912, sprang into nationwide prominence after World War II.

Dr. Green

For his work in setting up the Association of Georgia Klans, which now claims 25,000 members, Dr. Green recently was given the title "imperial wizard." He formerly was known as the "Grand Dragon."

Dr. Green's Klan membership dated back to the turbulent period around World War I. He slid almost automatically into the position of Grand Dragon when the movement was reorganized in 1944.

The hooded order had virtually fallen apart in the 1930's after a series of floggings.

When Dr. Green took charge, he denied that his group had anything to do with the old Klan, maintaining that it was nothing but a patriotic order, sworn to uphold the laws of State and Nation.

The old Ku Klux Klan was plagued by Federal tax suits. Dr. Green took over, changed the name, and successfully avoided any entanglements with the Government.

Dr. Green continued his medical practice along with his Klan leadership. His office was decorated with pictures and emblems relating to his profession, along with Klan insignia.

In Memoriam

SANFORD, GEORGE W. In memory of my husband, GEORGE W. SANFORD, who passed away one year ago today, August 19, 1949.
I often sit and think of him
And think of how he died.
To know that he could not say goodby
Before he closed his eyes.
One sad and lonely year has passed
Since my greatest sorrow fell.
The shock I received that afternoon
I still remember well.
They say time heals a broken heart.
But, oh, that isn't true.
Since you left me one year ago,
My heart still aches for you, husband dear.
Loving Wife,
SALLY E. SANFORD.

In loving remembrance of our dear father, GEORGE W. SANFORD.
Dear is the spot where he is laid,
Sweet is the memory that never will fade.
Part of our life lies very deep.
Under the sod where our dear one sleeps.
Nothing can ever take away
The love our hearts hold dear.
Of fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.
Loving Children,
LEANY, JOAN, GEARLDINE, GEARLD, PHILIP.

One on the Aisle—

A Warners Galaxy Kids the Business

By Richard L. Coe

THE WARNER'S "It's a Great Feeling" is good, mild fun that takes you behind the concrete walls of a movie studio—Warner's.

Jack Carson and Dennis Morgan hold hands with Doris Day, alternately and simultaneously, throughout this Technicolor musical, so you shouldn't have to be told much about the plot.

For surprise value and authenticity, you get quick and logical shots of bigtime stars off duty—Joan Crawford, Gary Cooper, Edward G. Robinson, Danny Kaye, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan and Errol Flynn. These are amusing moments and, because of the setting, lack that dragged-in air of many star-banked colossi.

A pleasantly aimless air filters through the story of a studio waitress who wants to become a star, a yarn now so tenuously sheer that this slight approach is about the only weight it can bear.

What will Metro say to an introductory remark that Warner's is the largest studio in the world when all the propaganda I've ever heard has put Culver City above Burbank in that regard? Still, megalomania in extremis is a disease all on the West Coast fully understand, and I'm sure that Mighty Metro will prove to be gentlemanly about this.

The picture gets under way with a search to find someone willing to direct Jack Carson in a picture. Michael Curtiz, Raoul Walsh, King Vidor and David Butler all say they won't touch it (though Butler actually did direct this one, being behind the camera megaphoning himself).

Dennis Morgan doesn't much want to be in it, but he falls for a waitress masquerading as Carson's unwanted wife in widow's weeds. Now all they lack is a leading lady. No, the yarn doesn't wind up as you think.

The waitress goes back to Wisconsin to get married. No more movies for her. Can this be a warning from les freres Warner to little ladies who would carve Hollywood careers? It must be, and not so subtle, either. Only flaw in the Warner argument for marriage contra careers is that the man Doris Day marries is not likely to grow in every village.

The songs include "My Absent-Minded Heart," At the Cafe Rendezvous," "There's Nothing Rougher than Love" and "Give Me a Song with a Beautiful Melody." All is photographed in peachy Technicolor and the pace is smoothly rapid.

As a station information clerk, Irving Bacon has an outstanding scene. Eddie Robinson's bit as an actor conscious of his trade mark, and Joan Crawford's rehash of lines she must be weary of, are both fun. While the spoofing of how to get along in the movies is obviously the comedy's intent, there's a jolly-good-fellow atmosphere that warns you the boys know they're kidding themselves, a matter that does not make for the sharpness of that movie-industry classic, "Once in a Lifetime." It's a broad, conscious humor, quite the reverse of this year's other ghastly revelation of movie life, "The Miracle of the Bells," in a contrast between which pictures a fruity, high-level discussion must lie.

—THE NATIONAL will be changing its ways again, come September . . . It has booked "Devil in the Flesh," that French film starring Gerard Philippe, last seen here in Dostoievsky's "The Idiot" . . . Long delayed at customs through censorship problems "Devil in the Flesh" highly pleased the Gotham critics who followed the trend set by international awards for "Le Diable au Corps."

"IT'S A GREAT FEELING." Warner Brothers release produced by Alexander Gottlieb. Screen play by Jack Rose and Mel Saavelson from a story by I. A. L. Diamond. Photographed in Technicolor by Wilfred M. Cline. Songs by Jack Styne and Sammy Cahn. Directed by David Butler. At the Warner.

VICKI CUMMINGS remarks, "It's errie spieling Noel Coward lines into the lap of President Buchanan" . . . Miss Cummings has to do just that as "Design for Living's" Gilda at Meridian Hill Park these rainless nights . . . Offstage, the Cummings larynx is as monks-cloth as on, and she lends a touch of glamor nightly to the Hotel 2400's cocktail lounge after the theater with leading men Alexander Kirkland and Derrick Lynn-Thomas.

OLNEY is still stunned over the uncontrolled laughter that greets each performance of Dean Harens in "Charm." . . . The players were frankly uncertain about John Kirkpatrick's 25-year-old comedy, but Director Harry Ellerbe warned them all to be prepared for laughs they didn't expect . . . All of which happened according to Harry's prophecy . . . With not an unfavorable "Charm" review in the four, Kirkpatrick's newest script, now being read, may have a live future.

TWO TRICK opening days this week . . . Today the Dupont presents a Spanish version of Cervantes' classic tale, "Don Quixote de la Mancha," with Englash subtitles . . . Sunday afternoon, the Palace will break out with "Madame Bovary," Jennifer Jones playing the title role and James Mason as Flaubert, the author, telling why his tale is not an insult to French women.

Randy Scott's a Bad Hombre, But a Noble One, in 'Doolins'

RANDOLPH SCOTT rides again at the Metropolitan in "The Doolins of Oklahoma."

In case you didn't happen to be living in Oklahoma Territory in 1889, the Doolins were folk to be feared. The boys were one with the James Boys, the Younger Brothers and the Daltons. They were agin the settlers who cut up the big ranches into farms, just the way "The Farmer and the Cowman" have at each other in the beloved "Oklahoma."

Randy is a Doolin, Big Bill Doolin, of course, and Big Bill wants to go straight because, during a three-month hideout, he's fallen in love with an organist, a farmer's daughter, and has married her.

This gentle behavior, of course, is poison to his old gang, who snitch on Big Bill, whose father-in-law takes him aside and tells him that it would be best for him to go. This paternal advice, however righteous, is tough for the sylph of the ivories to take, and so off she scuttles after him.

In Big Bill's hands now is the chance for escape. But like the Messrs. James, Younger, Dalton, etc., Big Bill knows that This Is Not Fair to the Girl He Loves. So he walks into martial fire and is shot dead.

Randy, natch, is wonderful as the noble thug and you suffer along with him to find his usual heroism this trip on the wrong side of the legal fence.

"THE DOOLINS OF OKLAHOMA." Columbia release produced by Harry Joe Brown. Screen play by Kenneth Gamet. Photographed by Charles Lawton, jr., music by George Duning and Paul Sawtell. Directed by Gordon Douglas. At the Metropolitan.

Miss Allbritton at Work

Louise Allbritton of all people, plays Rose of Cimarron, who loves John Ireland, which is not a wise thing for even a dance hall girl to do. Done up in elegance of the Western '80s, Miss Allbritton presents quite a less fashionable figure than she does in Washington circles this year of grace.

The characters all have spectacular names like Cattle Annie, Tulsa Jack, Arkansas and Red Buck and Wichita, which goes to show you that names were a lot more interesting when the Doolins were alootin'.

Charles Lawton's photography is first rate and Western fans will be pleased with all services rendered.

Argentine Treasury Chief Visited by U. S. Ambassador

Buenos Aires, Aug. 18 (AP).—U. S. Ambassador James Bruce visited Treasury Minister Ramon Cereijo today for what was described as a last-minute checkup on Argentine-United States economic problems prior to Bruce's departure for Washington.

A joint commission in Washington has been endeavoring to increase trade between the two countries, thus enabling Argentina to earn dollars which can be spent later for American machinery.

Bruce, who has been a moving spirit in the trade revival attempt, is expected to end his mission here within a week. It is believed he will be replaced early in September, possibly by Stanton Griffis, who resigned last June as American Ambassador to Egypt.

Cereijo is president of the Argentine national economic council.

United States Embassy aides are known to feel that the economic question is the major unsolved issue in Argentine-United States relations. Diplomatic relations between the two countries are described as satisfactory.

For the first time, the United States has a military ground mission here as well as naval and air force instructors. Bruce also has been given assurance by legislative leaders that Argentine ratification of the hemisphere defense treaty will be pushed through the present Argentine congress.

Bruce has an airplane reservation for Saturday. He will go first to Lima, Peru.

Will Provides Steps for D. C. Science Library

Philadelphia, Aug. 18 (AP).—Steps to found a scientific library in the District of Columbia are provided in the will of a Philadelphia investment broker probated today.

George H. Stephenson, who died July 17 at the age of 93, directed that at the death of his daughter, sister and sister-in-law and their direct descendants, his trustees are to form the George H. Stephenson Foundation, Inc.

Income from the estate is to be held for 21 years or until one million dollars accumulates and then is to be used to found a scientific library in the District of Columbia, the will states.

The income also is to be used to provide grants for graduate students, research workers and non-profit laboratories "in the fields of electrical sciences, biochemistry and other allied sciences."

Man Who Lunged At Wallace Beats Mother to Death

Pittsburgh, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—A battle-fatigued Navy veteran who "lunged" at Henry Wallace at a political rally last fall eluded police today after killing his mother with a poker and throwing her body down stairs.

Charles Johnston, chief of Allegheny County detectives, said John P. Clancy, 28, beat his 60-year-old widowed mother to death with a 4-foot poker late last night and fled.

Police records showed that Clancy was arrested last October 26 in Elizabeth, N. J., at a political rally when he broke from a crowd and lunged at Wallace, at that time Progressive Party candidate for President. Clancy was released when he claimed that he simply wanted to speak to Wallace and promised to leave town.

Indians Rout Browns By 14-4; Larry Doby, Vernon Clout Homers

St. Louis, Aug. 18 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians turned on the St. Louis Browns with a vengeance tonight, burying them under a 14-to-4 score to partially wipe out the stigma of last night's double defeat by the tail-enders. Bob Lemon had little trouble racking up his fifteenth victory while Larry Doby and Mickey Vernon each poled 3-run homers.

It was the only night game in the major leagues.

Vernon duplicated Doby's feat in the second to register his fourteenth round tripper. Two errors and a stolen base produced another run for the Tribe in the fourth.

They drove Drews to the showers in the sixth with six singles, good for as many runs. Vernon and Johnny Berardino each batted in a pair in that frame.

Ralph Winegarner, who relieved Drews, pitched perfect ball over the final three innings, when several Cleveland rookies had entered the lineup.

Lemon held the St. Louisans hitless until the fourth when Johnny Sullivan doubled and scored on Stan Spence's single and Jack Graham's fly.

Spence singled across two more for the home team in the seventh

Ferrier Second

Harrison's 65 Tops Field at Grand Rapids

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 18 (AP).—E. J. (Dutch) Harrison found the long Cascade Hills Country Club course to his liking today as he shot a 65—seven under par—to grab the lead in the opening 18-hole round of the 72-hole Grand Rapids Open golf tournament.

Harrison, shooting for $2600 first prize money, held a one-stroke lead over Jim Ferrier of San Francisco who had a 66 as a result of a red-hot incoming nine.

Ferrier tipped in a 40-yard approach for an eagle on the thirteenth hole and dropped one from 30 yards on the eighteenth hole for another eagle to give him 30 on the back nine. Par for the course is 36-36—72.

Harrison, playing out of St. Andrews, Ill., had seven pars and an eagle. He encountered his only major trouble on the 489-yard eighteenth hole where his second shot found a trap to the right of the green.

Harrison, whose short irons paid off for him all day, came out nicely and dropped his putt for a birdie to wind up his day's activities.

Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago, the No. 3 money winner among the nation's golf pros this year, found the going a bit rough on his outgoing nine and had to come up with a birdie and an eagle on the last two holes to post a 34 score at the turn. He added a 33 coming in, missing a six-foot putt on the eighteenth green.

Long-driving Chick Harbert of Detroit, who was rated a cofavorite with Mangrum in pre-tournament dope, had considerable putter trouble as he finished with a 38-37—75.

Cliff Settergren, Muskegon, Mich., pro, turned in a 69 to stay right up with the leaders. He had the most consistent round of the day as he had eight pars on the first nine before getting an eagle on the ninth hole. Settergren added eight more pars before he birdied the eighteenth.

The leaders:

Middlecoff Leading Snead by Six Strokes

Quincy, Ill., Aug. 18 (AP).—Cary Middlecoff, United States Open champion, expanded his lead over Sam Snead to six strokes today as the pair completed the Quincy appearance of their four-city exhibition golf tour.

Middlecoff shot a 33—33—66, four under par. Snead posted a 37—33—70. The Memphis linksman led Snead by two strokes after their opening round at Sioux City, Iowa, yesterday. Today's exhibition at the Quincy Country Club attracted a gallery of 1000.

Snead, Masters and P.G.A. champion and Middlecoff will complete their 72-hole medal play set billed as the unofficial world championship, with an 18-hole match tomorrow at Knoxville, Tenn., and another round of 18 at Memphis Saturday.

Phils Smack Dodgers for Third Time In Row, 9-5

Brooklyn, Aug. 18 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies did everything but roll over and play dead for the Brooklyn Dodgers' Rex Barney for five innings today. But in the sixth, they exploded for five runs, to win the game, 9-5, and drop the Brooks a full game behind the St. Louis Cardinals in the National League pennant chase.

It was the third straight victory for the Phils over the Dodgers.

Barney, of course, was not around at the end of the fateful sixth. He was relieved, in turn, by Carl Erskine, Jack Banta, Erv Palica and Paul Minner.

The Dodgers scored a run in the third, and another in the fifth, the latter a result of Bruce Edwards' homer into the left field seats. The Phils got one in the third, and Barney looked to be getting the better of a duel with Hank Borowy.

But in the sixth, three doubles, two home runs and a walk gave the Quakers their five runs. Richie Ashburn started by doubling to left. Granny Hamner doubled home Ashburn. After Dick Sisler popped out Del Ennis drilled a home run to left field. Stan Hollmig walked, and Barney walked to the showers.

Willie Jones greeted Erskine with a homer over the scoreboard in right, scoring Hollmig. A later double by Andy Seminick was meaningless.

The Phils got three more in the eighth, but the Brooks came to life in the ninth, getting rid of Borowy, with two runs. However, Shotton's men were not up to solving the slants of Jim Konstanty, who relieved Borowy, with the bases loaded, none out and one run in. Hank got credit for the victory.

Bunker Hill Loses Out to Wheeling, 7-3

Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug. 18 (AP).—Wheeling, W. Va., scored five runs in the seventh and eighth innings and defeated Bunker Hill of Washington, D. C., 7-3, for the American Legion's junior region 3 baseball championship here today.

A walk, passed ball, three infield hits and two wild throws spelled doom in the seventh for Washington's pitcher, Billy Nolan.

With the score tied at 2 all, Wheeling pitcher Dick Westfall led off the seventh with a walk and took second on a passed ball. Harry Sweeney advanced him to third by singling to short. Bob Loew then beat out a bunt, scoring Westfall.

Wild throws by third baseman Bob Fitzgerald and another by Nolan, himself, on the next two batters let in two more runs.

Wheeling added two more runs for good measure in the eighth two singles, a stolen base, passed ball and another wild pitch.

Washington came from behind in the second inning to tie the score at 2-2 on a walk to Fitzgerald and singled by Bob Paynee, a double steal and three walks. Washington's last futile run came in the ninth on Dave Keys single, a stolen base and George Billups' hit.

Wheeling became the first West Virginia team ever to win the regional title and the right to go to Trenton, N. J. for a try at the sectional honors.

Billick Lauds Rams' Hoerner

Occidental College, Calif., Aug. 18.—"I'm afraid they have a better all-around fullback than we have."

That was Head Coach Billick Whelchel's main reaction last night as he led his entire Washington Redskin squad to Gilmore Stadium to see the Los Angeles Rams in an intrasquad game. The Skins meet the Rams in an exhibition game August 26.

Whelchel was particularly impressed with Fullback Dick Hoerner, a 215-pound former Iowa ace who is starting his second year in pro ball. Hoerner scored one touchdown for the Bob Waterfield forces as they dropped a 28-13 verdict to a team led by quarterback Jim Hardy.

Tony Compagno—acquired from the Pittsburgh Steelers yesterday in a trade for Mike Micka—reported for his first practice today. He was almost as glad to join the Redskins as Micka was to play in Pittsburgh, his home town.

Horse Goes on Sitdown Strike—In Driver's Lap

Hamburg, N. Y., Aug. 18 (AP).—A harness-racing driver was injured today when his horse sat in his lap.

Benton Dempsey, 77, of Columbus, Ohio, was hurt during a prerace warmup at the Erie County Fair when his 3-year-old Brown gelding, Major McKinley, reared up and sat down on the sulky.

Hospital attendants said he suffered chest injuries, a possible broken ankle and abrasions. The sulky was demolished.

TONY LAVELLI, FORMER YALE UNIVERSITY BASKETBALL GREAT
. . . A quick flick at a shiney face before going on stage at Capitol Theater

Clings to His Clef

Lavelli, Yale Star, at Capitol, Prefers 'Bop' to Basketball

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

What a place to find Yale's greatest All-America basketball star—backstage at the Capitol Theater.

But there he was, young hook-shot specialist Tony Lavelli, patting pancake makeup on his cheeks.

Tony began a one-week stand at the Capitol yesterday, playing three songs four times a day. That's his first love, playing his accordion and composing music. He puts them ahead of basketball.

And just to prove it, he tells you he turned down an $11,000 contract from the Syracuse pros to devote his time to music. He got the Syracuse offer after graduating from Yale last June with 1964 points in 97 games—a major college scoring record.

The 6-foot-4-inch cleancut looking chap explains in a slow New England accent:

"I love playing basketball. But I was playing the piano and accordion before I tookup basketball. And though most people don't know it, I was doing okay on the stage before I made a name for myself at Yale.

"As a matter of fact, I played the Capitol here four years ago, and found the audience most responsive.

"Of course the pay may not be as good as professional basketball right now, but I hope some day it will be. I'm getting $300 for this week's stand here, which is unusually good. But I don't have any future bookings.

"I want to compose music. Three of my songs have been published. Playing the accordion gives me a chance to sustain myself, financially, while I compose. I wrote light stuff. My three songs are 'Cocktail Time at Dusk,' 'Scottish Lad and His Lassie' and [he blushes] 'You're the Boppiest Bee-Bop.'

"I haven't given up basketball completely. While I'm studying at Juliard School of Music in New York, I'll be playing amateur ball with the New York A.C.

"I turned down an offer to tour with Eddie Cantor so that I could attend school. However, in October I expect to do a week's stand in Chicago's Olympic Theater while preparing to play for the College All-Stars against the Minneapolis Lakers. Alex Groza, Wah Wah Jones, Ralph Beard and Ed MacAuley will play for us, too.

"My next step is to find a good lyrist. Know of one? The publishers tell me they like my melodies but think I'm weak on lyrics.

Hutchinson Wins 12th for Tigers, 2 to 0

Chicago, Aug. 18 (AP).—The fifth-place Detroit Tigers blanked the Chicago White Sox today, 2-0, to gain an even break in their two-game series.

Freddie Hutchinson, with ninth-inning assistance from Virgil Trucks, held the White Sox to six hits in notching his twelfth victory. He has won his last seven in a row.

The Tigers used two unearned runs, one in the first and another in the third, to close out a 19-inning scoring famine. Billy Pierce, who pitched eight innings on a yield of three hits, was the victim of these two spurts in suffering his twelfth setback.

Don Kolloway walked with one out in the first, and scored on a combination of George Kell's grounder and Cass Michaels' boot of a roller off Vic Wertz's bat.

The game's last run was fashioned when Kell and Wertz hit successive singles with two out in the third, and Kell scored on Herb Adams' throwing error.

Centers Have Heft - - and They're Rough

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Occidental College, Calif. Aug. 18.—There's nothing alarmingly weak about the center prospects of the Washington Redskins, but they could be a lot better.

They could have been better if Tommy Thompson, a burly youngster from William and Mary College, had listened to Redskin offers instead of casting his lot with the Cleveland Browns of the rival All-America Conference.

Al Demao

Thompson, drafted by the 'Skins two years ago, was expected to step right up alongside two veteran centers and share their duties. But the lure of cash was too much. The Redskins insist it was a bonus handed him before his senior year that swung Thompson to the Browns. At any rate it was more cash, or more timely cash, which lost a brilliant prospect for the Washington pros.

As they stand right now, the Redskins have just two centers—Al Demao and Clyde Ehrhardt. Both are big, sturdy, rough and capable. Both are well-seasoned and smart in the seemingly simple business of moving the pigskin from the ground to Sammy Baugh's waiting hands.

But an injury to either Demao or Ehrhardt could hurt the Redskins seriously. They saw how much it hurt last season when Demao, after competing in 40 consecutive games from the time he joined the 'Skins in 1941, chipped his elbow in the Eagle game in Philadelphia and was laid up most of the rest of the year. And they knew how sorely they missed Ehrhardt's shining performances on both offense and defense when he was forced to stay out of football in 1947 because of aggravated war wounds.

Demao is the smaller of the two vets, at about 225. The former member of the "undefeated, untied . . . and uninvited" Duquesne University eleven of 1941 is one of the hardest workers on the squad and is an excellent middle line backer on defense. He is 29 years old.

Ehrhardt, All-America at the University of Georgia in 1941 and 1942, once led the Nation's collegiate players in pass interceptions and still retains his knack of knocking down these flips right over the line. He is a 235-pounder, 28 years old.

The only newcomers who figure to give Demao and Ehrhardt a breathing spell are Dick Stovall and Andy Lazor, the first obtained from Detroit in a trade and Lazor coming from Washington State.

In training Stovall and Lazor have been used largely at guard on offense. Stovall is a rugged Texan, not too large, who plays the game up to the hilt and seems to love his line-backing job on defense. Lazor is the quietest player on the Redskin squad, a 23-year-old 200-pounder, who looks smaller and might still grow.

Al Lets in 2 Runs, Helps Griffs Blow 4-to-0 Lead

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

New York, Aug. 18.—Second baseman Al Kozar made his first start for the Nats in three weeks today and his presence in the lineup proved to be a joyous occasion—for the New York Yankees.

In the midst of digging out from underneath a 4-0 deficit, the Yankees received unexpected help from the young infielder who booted in two runs to enable the league leaders to cart away their second straight from the sad-sack Nats, 5-4.

Kozar's error and attendant snooze on the same play boosted New York's margin over the idle Red Sox to four full games.

Kozar Dozes

At the same time, it provided the Nats with their eighth straight defeat, their thirty first in the last 35 skirmishes and also stretched Pitcher Mickey Harris' personal losing streak to seven in a row since joining the Nats June 13.

Just what possessed Kozar to commit the blunder he alone knows, but whatever the reason it met with the hearty approval of the 6638 Yankee Stadium customers who sat through a drizzle and a 55-minute interruption to see the Bombers march on.

With two Yankee runs already across in the fourth, two out and runners on second and third, Cliff Mapes sent an easy bounder to Kozar.

The ball plopped into his glove and then out again as Gerry Coleman came in from third. Instead of picking up the ball, which lay at his feet, Kozar stood by for a second cursing his luck.

Gene Woodling, who was on second, lost no time, hustling all the way in from second as Kozar's teammates exhorted him to pick up the ball.

When he did, he very leisurely flipped it to Sam Dente at shortstop who had as much use for it at the moment as the Aga Khan does for a dollar.

Woodling's run tied the score at 4-4 as Clyde Vollmer's 13th homer had set off a four-run Nat spree in the top half of the same inning. Not to be outdone, the Yankees started their four-run session with a homer also as Tommy Henrich chipped in his 21st to launch their portion of the inning.

After a delay of almost one hour for rain, the Yankees fashioned their fifth run in the sixth inning on Phil Rizzuto's double and Cliff Mapes' single.

The Nats made only five hits, but none off Allie Reynolds who pitched five hitless innings in relief to stash away his 12th victory while Harris, who gave up seven safeties to the Yankees, was the innocent victim, suffering his tenth loss.

Nats Chase Byrne

The Nats eliminated Tommy Byrne in the fourth inning when Vollmer's homer launched the four-run offensive, with the bases loaded as the result of a Dente single, a hit batsman and a walk. Harris brought in two runs with a single and Eddie Yost made it 4-0 with another single, this one finishing off Byrne.

Righthander Duanne Pillette relieved at this juncture and got Sam Mele on a fly to Johnny Lindell to halt the rumpus.

Henrich's shot into the right-field stands was only the beginning of Harris' troubles in the same inning. Johnny Lindell followed with a popup back of first which went for a double and when Mele tried to throw him out at second and threw into left field instead, Lindell went to third.

Coleman's single scored him. After Charlie Silvera flied out, Woodling walked, setting the stage for Kozar's error. Rizzuto sacrificed both runners along and then came Mapes' grounder to Kozar.

IN SHORT—It took Reynolds 55 minutes to register his second strike out. He had two strikes on Kozar when the game was interrupted by rain and when play was resumed Robertson batted for Kozar and fanned on the second pitch.

Today's attendance, 6638, was the lowest of the season at Yankee Stadium. This gave the Nats the league lead in keeping fans away from parks. They also helped establish low attendance records at Chicago, Boston, Cleveland and Detroit this year. In the third, DiMaggio hit a 445 foot out as Simmons raced almost to hte left center wall to haul in his fly. In the next inning, Vollmer's fly was 100 feet shorter, but it dropped into the left field boxes for a home run.

The Nats return home tomorrow night where they'll be warmly greeted by the Red Sox, if no one else. The Sockers beat 'em six in a row in Fenway Park last week-end and will send Mel Parnell out after his 19th against the Griffs who are countering with Dick Weik.

'Miss Washington' Gets Brand New Auto Tonight

Mary Jane Hayes, 19, newest "Miss Washington" will be presented with a Nash Airflyte automobile before tonight's Nats-Boston Red Sox game at Griffith Stadium.

The car is one of the prizes in the $5,000 swag which Mary Jane receives, along with the honor of representing the District in the "Miss America" contest at Atlantic City on Labor Day.

Bill Talbert, Mulloy Upset By Aussies

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Two youthful Australians knocked off America's top doubles team today but failed to convince their manager they can repeat the victory in next month's Davis Cup finals.

Frank Sedgman and George Worthington scored probably the greatest doubles upset of the year in eliminating defending titlists Gardnar Mulloy, Miami, Fla., and Billy Talbert, New York City, 6—4, 1—6, 7—5, 9—7, in the quarter-finals of the National Doubles Tennis Championships.

Despite their impressive triumph, Australia's Davis Cup Manager Cliff Sproule said after the match they would not be his doubles team in the international tennis classic between Australia and the United States at Forest Hills, N. Y.

Sproule said he will pair the 21-year-old Sedgman with Jack Bromwich for Australia's double combine. He felt that Worthington, only 20 and playing for the first time

Cambridge Plays Host To Speeders

By Happy Walker

The Choptank River town of Cambridge, Md., will stage its annual two-day power regatta this Saturday and Sunday, sponsored by the Cambridge Yacht Club.

Walker

The favorite speed course on the eastern shore, is fast becoming the Mecca for area speed moguls, being only a two-hour jaunt by car, or from favorite bay-side clubs just two hours by water. Saturday will be devoted to three 15-mile Gold Cup heats with Harry Lynn's La-Ha-La, the defender. Lynn who came so close to take last year's President's Cup, has not been too successful so far this season. He should be hard to take on Saturday.

Promising to be a hard fought round will be the Pacific one design class, in which Bill Castell, Arlington speed crown aspirant, will attempt to wrest the world record from Louis J. Novotky, west coast surgeon, who holds the record in his Cherub. Castell will make the try in his recently acquired Black Magic.

Sunday will crowd in a full schedule of inboards from 48 c. i. one litre jobs to the mile a minute 225 c. i. hydros. Look for Joe Palmer, Aubrey Thacker, Jack Kerley, Earle Hildebrand and Roy Bagley to be on hand.

RESERVED SEATS for the President's Cup Regatta power events slated for September 17 and 18 can be secured at the Chastleton Hotel, Marine Trade Association offices, 913 Union Trust Building, Evening Star information desk, and the Arcade Pontiac Co. The ducats, $1.50 for each day's spectacle, are limited, so Ben Treadwell, reviewing chairman, advises early purchase to avoid disappointment.

THE LATEST WORD on the ill-fated Skip-a-Long, Stanley Dollar's West Coast gold cupper, which sank in some 400 feet of water at Lake Tahoe last week, is that she will be raised. Dollar, recent victor in the Harmsworth classic at Detroit, had stated he would definitely show at the President's Cup September titular event. There is still the possibility that barring motor damage, the Harmsworth holder will be on hand to give Washington a sample of master performance.

THAT GREATER Washington is fast becoming a center of boating activities with an increased number of boat owners, is shown in the latest registration figures, revealed today by Captain Otha Sanders, Harbor Precinct master. According to figures resulting from the annual registration required boat owners in Washington which is somewhat of an increase over last year. Cruisers and sailing craft head the list of slight increases. There is no way of telling the thousands of boat owners who keep their craft in adjacent waters, partly due to insufficient berthing space and partly to avoid personal property taxes levied on boat owners in the District. The most conservative estimate is that greater Washington owners number close to 6000.

Gift of Gold Is First in Steeplechase

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 18.—Mrs. R. S. Benton's Bungalese, a mare which generally starts like a hurricane and finishes like a mild zephyer, struck to her running guns all the way today. The 7-year-old daughter of Bull Moose, which cannot be guessed consistently, turned in her smashing front-running effort in the featured Elray Farm Purse.

With Jockey Patsy Grant in the saddle, Bungalese gave her scattered backers few anxious moments and returned a $16.40 mutue' after the majority in the crowd of 6000 had passed her up due to discouraging past performances at the Hagerstown and Cumberland meetings.

Intermittent Rain

Bungalese was clocked in 1.03 2-5 for the five furlongs over a heavy, holding track and under skies that leaked intermittently throughout the program.

In visiting the winner's circle for the second time this year in 10 tries, Bungalese went to the front soon after starter Eddie Blind pressed the button. Swing-Star, Olecranon and several others tried to run with the leader early.

Finally Son O'Diz moved up and offered a mild challenge before tiring gradually through the stretch. Fenland, off poorly, ran a remarkable race and took second money from Son O'Diz in a photo for that position.

Public Choice Wins

Favorite players had to share winners with longshot pickers. However, the public choice was the winner of the day's steeplechase, the first jumping event here.

Gift of Gold half of the Adams entry, toyed with the opposition and won in easy fashion under the handling of Jockey F. D. Adams. Mrs. E. L. Holton's Busy Moments was second with Refugio, a running mate of the winner, in third position. A variety of falls marked the event but both horses and riders escaped injury. The winner paid a mere $2.80.

The daily double paid $17.80 and had a Washington angle. Midnight Queen, the property of S. H. Rogers, Capital City mill owner, took the first race under Jockey Johany Tammaro's handling and paid $4.60. Apprentice Richard Lawless rode P. Cross' Wve River, a $7.60 shot, to victory in the second event.

20 Horses Die In Track Fire

Raton, N. Mex., Aug. 18 (AP).—Flames were brought under control early today after sweeping through three barns at the La Mesa horse race track. Two stablemen were severely burned.

Twenty thoroughbreds were destroyed, including a stud, Lu Bre, which Howard Lackey of Raton recently purchased from C. S. Howard for $10,000. An official said the damage to the barns would exceed $20,000. He said he could not estimate the value of the horses lost.

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks: At Bel Air Washington hasn't had a top-flight jockey since Sonny Workman hung up his tack some years back. However, we could boast of another home town pride in the near future if all the good things said about young Herman Amos, a Takoma Park lad, come true. The youngster is just starting out after three years of saddle education garnered around the barns and in morning workouts. Amos has had three competitive chances so far and has been close on each occasion. Horsemen are already impressed by his courage and his knack of getting run out of mounts. Herman is only 17, packs only 98 pounds and has a baby face. He is under contract to Earl Auld, Washington trainer. See you on the rail. BILL.

'Expert' Says Season Is Over

Shirley May Again Calls Off Channel Try As Weather Turns Cold and Cuban Fails

Wissant, France, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Shirley May France and 12 other aspiring channel swimmers called off their attempts today when high winds whipped the 50 degree water into choppy waves.

One swimmer tried it—Jose Antonio Cortinas, 32-year-old Cuban. But he had to give up after six hours because the cold water caused cramps in his legs.

Shirley May abandoned her attempt for at least after her father, Walter France, decided in Dover, England, that Shirley's wait for favorable weather "had taken the edge off her training." She will return to Dover tomorrow.

Cortinas, who started his swim at 12:45 a.m. (7:45 p.m. Wednesday EDT) in cool and cloudy weather, swam strongly for the first two hours. Suddenly, however, he tired and asked for a cup of coffee.

An hour and a half later, the Cuban, who wore brief black wool trunks and a white bathing cap, stopped and called to the launch alongside for brandy. An hour later he had sharp cramps.

He said he would try again later, and there were tears in his eyes as he was pulled out of the water with both of his legs paralyzed by the cramps.

A French expert on channel swimming, noting the 50-degree water temperature and choppy seas, said "the season is all over" and predicted none would conquer the stormy strait this year.

"The cold was a torture," Cortinas said. "The difference between the water in Cuba and in the channel is the difference between a cup of coffee and an iceberg.

"I consider that anyone who can cross that channel is a hero. I don't understand how a woman could do it."

Reds Latest Claim—Best Swimmers

Moscow, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Iksander Faizulili, prominent Soviet swimmer and "sports master," wrote today in the newspaper Trud that Soviet swimmers "must not only swim faster but farther than everybody."

He said that Russia was the motherland of long distance swimming and reported that a shipwreckd Russian sailor back in 1773 swam 14.9 miles off the African coast in 12 hours.

Faizulili said that another pre-revolutionary Russian, Leonid Romanchenko, swam 29.8 miles through the Caspian Sea in 24 hours and 10 minutes, "beating the Englishman who claimed the world record for swimming the English Channel."

(Fastest Englishman to swim the English Channel was Thomas Blower who did the 22-mile distance in 1937 in 13 hours, 29 minutes. The channel record of 10 hours, 45 minutes, is held by Venceslas Spacek, a Czech.)

Southeastern Czar Asks Spring Grid Trials Be Halted

Columbus, Miss., Aug. 18 (AP).—Southeastern Conference Commissioner Bernie Moore today called for a campaign to discourage spring football tryouts.

Moore said too many high school seniors are called on to attend too many tryouts that last too long.

"I don't see how they ever graduate when they miss so much school," Moore added.

The grid commissioner spoke at the annual summer meeting of the Mississippi Big Eight Sports Writers Association here.

Moore said football is America's greatest game, and should be encouraged in both grammar and prep schools. Its greatness, he said was evident in the popularity it enjoyed.

New York Honors Connie Mack With Big Parade

New York, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Connie Mack, 86-year-old owner-manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, will be honored tomorrow by a traditional ticker tape parade up Broadway to City Hall where he will receive a hero's welcome from Mayor William O'Dwyer.

Mack will be honored by the New York Yankees Sunday in an unprecedented ceremony for an opposing team official. O'Dwyer, recognizing the slim, erect Mack's position as baseball's most distinguished personality, asked that the city also be included in the tribute.

The police, fire and sanitation department bands will lead the march from Bowling Green to the steps of City Hall.

Sain Notches 9th, Heath Slams Homer

Boston, Aug. 18 (AP).—Boston's reviving Braves belted four home runs today as they defeated the New York Giants, 10 to 6. It was the second straight triumph under Acting Manager Johnny Cooney and moved the Braves to within a half game of the third-place New Yorkers.

Three of the homers came on offerings of Larry Jansen. Bob Elliott and Jeff Heath smacked successive homers in the second and Elbie Fletcher blasted one in the third.

The fourth homer came in the sixth when Jimmy Russell lashed one of Hank Behrman's tosses into the stands.

Pirates Shut Out Chicago Cubs, 2-0

Pittsburgh, Aug. 18 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates shutout the Chicago Cubs 2-0 today on Rookie Jim Walsh's three hitter. Runs scored on Ralph Kiner's hits accounted for both Pittsburgh tallies.

In blanking Chicago, Walsh evened the score with the Cubs. Last week they beat him in his debut by the same score. Rookie Wayne Terwilliger tripled for the Cubs in the fifth but was put out trying to steal home. He got a harmless single in the eighth.

Kiner scored Tom Saffell with a single in the first after Saffell had doubled. In the seventh Stan Rojek singled and came home when Kiner tripled to right.

Bud Wilkinson Says:

Vet-Propelled College Teams Have Only One Good Year Left

Oklahoma City, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Football followers can expect only one more season of "top performance" by college teams that have been "souped up by war veterans," Charles (Bud) Wilkinson, University of Oklahoma coach said today.

"The game will go back to the high school graduates next year," Wilkinson said. "We've reached the end of the four or five high school classes that were telescoped together on college teams at the end of the war."

This view, he conceded, is not shared by many observers across the country, who contend that war veterans, particularly married men, haven't always given their best on the gridiron.

"However, with a few exceptions we haven't found it that way at Oklahoma," Wilkinson said. "We expect to see a decline in the play. It will be a long time before we find players like Buddy Burriss, our All-America guard, and Jack Mitchell, the offensive leader of our 1948 team."

Leadership, the coach of last year's Big Seven and Sugar Bowl champs added, is the making-or-breaking factor in football teams nowadays.

"Great teams don't come from great squads any more," he said. "Everybody has a fine squad these days. But a team needs two or possibly three men to inspire greatness. That's our crying need at Oklahoma this year."

Miss Bishop Gets Library Poetry Post

Elizabeth Bishop, widely known poet, will succeed Leonie Adams as consultant in poetry in English at the Library of Congress, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Bishop's one-year term will begin in September.

The consultant serves the Library of Congress in an advisory capacity on acquisition, cataloging and bibliographical work connected with its poetry collections, and aids in special projects.

The chair of poetry, established in 1936, is financed by a gift from Archer M. Huntington of New York.

Miss Bishop, 38, is the author of "North and South," published by Houghton, Mifflin in 1946. Two years earlier she had received the first special Houghton, Mifflin Poetry Prize Fellowship and in 1947 she received a Guggenheim Fellowship for Creative writing.

Miss Bishop, a native of Worcester, Mass., has lived in Nova Scotia, New York and Paris, but most of her writing years have been divided between New England and Key West, which form the background of many of her poems.

U. S. to Warn Israel, Arabs To End Row

NYNT News Service

The United States has decided to warn Israel and the Arab nations, it was learned yesterday that unless they get together now on a settlement of their problems, this Nation cannot continue to underwrite aid for Palestine's 940,000 Arab refugees.

The decision was reached after Paul A. Porter, American representative on the United Nations Conciliation Commission, reported to President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson this week that the commission has made almost no progress in the refugee and territorial questions dividing the two sides. (Porter left New York yesterday by air for Lausanne.)

To date, the United States is satisfied neither with the Arabs nor the Israelis. Ambassador Eliahu Elath discussed Israel's position for an hour yesterday with Assistant Secretary of State George McGhee, but said afterward Israel cannot go beyond her offer to repatriate 100,000 Palestine Arabs, including about 25,000 who, he said, have reentered Israel illegally, and others admitted to reunite broken families.

The United States views such a proposal as unrealistic in view of the large number of refugees. Furthest the Arabs have gone is to agree to resettle those refugees who do not wish to return to Palestine, while insisting on the right of entry for those who want to reclaim their homes.

Arevalo Reported Next Guatemala Foreign Minister

Guatemala, Guatemala, Aug. 18 (AP).—Foreign Minister Enrique Munoz Meany said today President Juan Jose Arevalo had accepted his resignation. Guatemala newspapers said Ismael Gonzales Arevalo, now Ambassador to the United States, replaces Munoz.

Semi-official sources reported the president also has accepted the resignations of two other members of his cabinet.

The cabinet offered to resigned last week to give the president a free hand in reorganizing the government after the failure of the July revolt.

"A discussion period will follow the reception so parents of all Falls Church school children can learn at first hand something of the plans for the new Falls Church school system," Orme said, in making the announcement.

Hypnotism Advocated for Psychoneurotics

London, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—An article in the British Medical Association Journal recommended today that hypnotism be used more widely as a harmless anesthetic and for the relief of psychoneurotic symptoms.

"Hypnotism might prove of value in the treatment of such single symptoms as headache, insomnia, stammer or neuritis," the article said. It is probable that all normal individuals, if fully cooperative, are capable of being put into the hypnotic state.

Another article suggested that doctors should learn how to hypnotize themselves so that the enemy could not extort information from them.

Ex Delinquent Sings Blues With Encores

St. Louis, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Internal Revenue Collector James P. Finnegan today received the following letter:

"My wife just died. I broke my leg yesterday. I lost a job last week that I held for 25 years. Two sons in the Army can't help. My home has been foreclosed and my furniture taken by a mortgage holder.

"And now you want me to pay $5 in back taxes."

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—President Truman will name Governor Hastie of the Virgin Islands to the Federal bench. It will be the highest judicial post ever held by a member of his race . . . Edna Ferber's next book-writing project will be the story of the Kleberg family of Texas and their fabulous domain, the King Ranch . . . At the crest of the heat wave last week, Justice Ferdinand Pecora, presiding at the Lonely Hearts murder trial, shut off the air-conditioning. The judge, the lawyers and some of the jurors complained that the air-conditioning had given them lumbago—but the defendants, who are in good health wanted the air-conditioning.

Stanley Kramer, who produced "Champion" and "Home of the Brave," will do a film adaptation of "Cyrano de Bergerac," with Jose Ferrer in the title role. Ferer played it on Broadway a few seasons ago, and won the critics' praises . . . Ferrer also has been signed to do a remake of "The Baker's Wife," in Paris . . . Artie Samish, subject of Collier's two-part expose of his lobbying activities, in which were quoted his boasts of controlling the California Legislature and how he elected mayors, legislators and prosecuting officers, finally wrote to Collier's last week. He asked for six prints of the color photo used as an illustration—the photo showing Samish holding a dummy on his lap, the dummy signifying the Legislature.

John Loder appeared in summer stock in Newport last week. He was given a luncheon by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, sr. She took him on a tour of her house, and in the drawing room he saw the inscribed photos of several kings—two Kings of England, two Kings of Belgium, a King of Spain, the Kings of Norway, Sweden and Denmark, and a King of Yugoslavia. Mrs. Vanderbilt then asked the actor for an autographed photo . . . When Loder was convinced Mrs. Vanderbilt was serious about it, he returned to New York and autographed what he considered a suitable photograph of himself—a photo showing him in the role of Tsar Alexander of Russia.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

"The Unknown Age"

The years from 6 to 12 are ones about which we know comparatively little. Many studies have been made of preschool children. Much has been written about adolescence. For some reason, however, we've steered clear of the "middle years." They've even been known as the "period of latency"—a time when nothing much that is interesting or dramatic is supposed to happen.

Anyone who has watched the way boys and girls of these ages associate themselves in gangs and clubs has marveled at the physical skills they work so hard to develop or has seen the variety of hobbies that are followed. He knows that much is happening. Still, we feel "stumped" because so often these 6-to-12-year-olds don't reveal their thoughts, bare their problems, or seek adult companionship as much as either preschool or adolescent youngsters.

A recent publication of the Children's Bureau in Washington, D. C., has gathered together in an effective way some of the things we do know about this age group. It is called simply, "Your Child From 6 to 12," and can be obtained by writing to the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C.

Laff-a-Day

"YOU'VE got good eyes—is that a DC-4?"

TRY IT — SET UP A BUSINESS AND SELL LEMONADE

How would you like to run a business of your own? Why not have a lemonade stand? You might need Mother's help in getting your supplies together and with the mixing of the lemonade, but the actual selling would be your own responsibility.

The important thing in making your stand is to use clean materials, so that it will look sanitary to your customers. A large clean packing box with a shelf added can be covered with oil cloth or a clean table cloth. The shelf in the box gives a place for you to put dirty glasses, extra napkins, and straws. Your money box, used for making change, can be hidden on this shelf, too. Make your "change box" from a muffin pan so that you will have a section for pennies, nickles, dimes, and larger coins.

Use Mother's directions for making lemonade, and keep an ice cold pitcher full for your customers. Put up a sign, but don't drink up all of the profits!

Tomorrow—Use old newspaper to press leaves.

CAUTIOUS HIRED MAN

Q. Chips, a carpenter, did some work on the barn of Hayes, a farmer. At the conclusion of the job, which Hayes found to be satisfactory, Chips asked if he could leave his tools in the barn overnight. Hayes said it would be all right. The next morning when Chips went to get the tools, Hayes' new hired man would not let him come on the premises, despite Chips' explanations. Hayes having gone away for the day, all Chips could do was wait. While he was waiting, the barn burned, destroying the tools. Upon whom does the loss of the tools fall?

A. The tools were lawfully on Hayes' property, by Hayes' permission. Chips therefore had a right to go onto the property to get them. Hayes' hired man was in legal effect acting for Hayes when he refused to let Chips get his tools, and the effect of it was to exercise a claim of ownership of the tools in behalf of Hayes, the farmer. This is called conversion, and means that Hayes, through the action of his hired man, "bought" Chips' tools. Chips is entitled to recover the value of the tools from Hayes. . . . F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

As Long as We Love

Dear one, the world belongs to us . . . In every song and sigh . . . As long as we are faithful and . . . We do not say good-bye . . . As long as you abide with me . . . And I am true to you . . . And hand in hand we understand . . . And share the old and new . . . There is no rain or hurricane . . . To foster any fear . . . While we are honest with ourselves . . . And we are both sincere . . . There is no snow to lock the door . . . Or wind to rock the roof . . . Unless we lose our balance and . . . We try to be aloof . . . The world is ours and life itself . . . Is perfectly divine . . . As long as I belong to you . . . And you are really mine.

Iliff, Leonard Rist and Mrs. Rist, Mr. and Mrs. Crena de Iongh, S. G. McFarlane, William Gilmartin, Drew Dudley and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Beyen.

Guests from the State Department were the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. George McGhee, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sparks, Harry Owen and Burke Knapp.

A LUNCHEON was given yesterday at the Mayflower by Assistant Secretary of State, George W. Perkins, in honor of the Minister of Defense of the Union of South Africa, F. C. Erasmus, and the Chief of Staff of the Union of South America, General L. Byers.

Other guests were Brig. H. S. Cilliers, the Ambassador of the Union of South Africa, H. T. Andrews; the First Secretary, W. Dirkse-van-Schalkwyk; the Air and Military Attache, Lieut. Col. J. A. de Vos, and the Second Secretary, M. I. Botha.

Reception to Honor South African Envoy

THE Minister of Finance of South Africa, Klaas Havenga, and Mrs. Havenga, with Dr. Holloway, Secretary of Finance, arrived in New York yesterday and will be in Washington for a short stay. As the Ambassador and Mrs. Harry Andrews are in the throes of packing for Paris, where Mr. Andrews has been appointed Ambassador, there can be no entertaining at the embassy.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris will give a large farewell reception for the Ambassador and Mrs. Andrews, who returned late last week from Cape Cod. They will leave Washington on August 31 for New York, and will spend a week there saying farewells to Mr. Andrews' former colleagues at the United Nations. With their daughter, Miss Lydia Andrews, they will sail on September 8 on board the Mauretania.

Fashion Forecast For Fall

Trusty Little Woolen Is Best All-Around Pal Of College, Career, and Government Girls

This is the second in a series of 10 articles on fall fashion trends.

By Peggy Preston

NO. 1 ITEM in any woman's winter wardrobe—be she 16 or 60—is a good, basic dress. She can do without satins and sables, taffetas and laces, but a trusty little woolen is her all-around pal.

It's going to be fun to shop for such a dress this fall. For, if variety is the spice of fashion, then the wools have it two to one. Jersey, weatherweight tweeds, flannel, sheer wool, worsted, and novelty knit swing along singly, or in combination with corduroy and velveteen, to make a clever array of outfits.

These are the career-building, class-going, train-catching, date-making frocks. So, wherever you're headed this fall keep a sharp eye out for your special type of basic dress. Carefully cull your own from the wide variety of styles and fabrics, and around it build the rest of your wardrobe.

If September is to find you in a college classroom or a Government office, you're apt to "go for" the separate idea. These are the little numbers that have the verve and nerve to go anywhere from daylight to dark.

Take a simple jersey skirt and blouse, for instance, in a matched shade. Looks fairly ordinary at first glance, but watch what it can turn into—a fourway costume! Match the skirt with a turtle-necked jersey or sweater for daytime; switch to a short-sleeved, low-necked jersey for date-time; a sleeveless blazer turns it into an early fall suit; add a velvet blouse and you have a cocktail dress.

Cardigan-Jackets

THEN, there are the knits, tricked up so that you hardly recognize them, and combined with velveteen, corduroy or jersey. Something to look for in the knit division are dresses with cardigan-jacket tops that can see service with other outfits.

The middy-blouse dress—looking as though it had stepped straight out of the "Flapper" era, is in for a trial run. Pleated serge, flannel or jersey skirts are matched with a jersey middy top. It is one of several incoming loose-waisted ideas, and stylists are depending on the college lass to give it recognition.

On the more conservative side is the one-piece dress. Sheer wool, a high fashion fabric, can present a fastidious picture when made into a slim black or navy basic. When shown in a jacket-dress, you can be assured you are seeing a veritable "gem" of an outfit, one you can practically live in for the next couple of seasons.

Lightweight tweeds in pastel shades of pink, lavender and blue are a bit on the expensive side, but if you can afford them they spell genuine style. Cut as a slenderizing coat-dress and matched with a cloche of the same fabric, it will look handsome under a fur neckpiece this fall. It gives promise, in face, of replacing the fall suit.

One-Piece Frocks

CLAN plaids and jerseys figure prominently in one-piece frock fashions. You will see a lot of them made with moderately full skirts, sporting huge pockets, the bodice cut on shirt-waist lines.

Little "extras," such as weskits, jumpers, jackets, boleros and ties all play a fetching role in the life of your basic dress. Employing the mix-match idea, you can introduce a weskit of suede or checked flannet to your jersey skirt and come off with a new costume. Jackets of corduroy or velveteen can transform your tartan plaid dress or tweed skirt.

In the basic color field beige or camel's hair; gray in a variety of shades; navy and brown are the leaders. Black is taking a back seat for the time being.

Against these neutral shades it is effective to throw a vibrant, glowing color. Red ('tis said the men can't resist it) is striking in accessories for a basic dress, and it is at its best with beige, gray, navy or black. Brown calls for such colors as rust, tangerine, yellow.

If you are blue of eye, you don't want to neglect this flattering color when you select your basic dress and accessories. Beautiful, misty shades are available in many of the woolens and they can give your eyes the color of cornflowers.

LET'S GET RIGHT DOWN to "basics" and with the help of fashion artist Rae Hesler pick out the type of wool dress we would like to own. That saucy miss at bottom right is shouting "One for the money and three to go!" as she flaunts her newest idea in separates. For party time she wears a quilted jersey skirt with open-necked jersey blouse. She will switch to a turtle-necked jersey for classroom and office. All three are to be found in matching or contrasting shades at Erlebacher's. A bright, gay tartan plaid by Sheila Lynn is the choice of the girl at left. Her's is in lightweight wool, cut with modeartely full skirt, accented with two huge pockflets. It is available in a variety of plaids at Woodward & Lothrop's. A new type sweater, which looks and feels like cashmere, but doesn't cost like it, is worn with a swirling corduroy skirt at top. Sweater is gray, skirt may be coral, gray, rust, green or beige. Both are at Peck & Peck's. That little weskit, tucked in there at top, could be made of tweed, jersey, corduroy or velveteen. You'll find it everywhere in many variations. Sleek, and very new, indeed, is the two-piece wool frock at top right. Skirt, which is peg topped and buttons down the front, is dark gunmetal, a color that is repeated in the trimming of the light gray jacket. Good bet for the business girl, it may be found at Raleigh Haberdasher

New Colors Add Tang

Chutney, a deep night-time brown, and curry, a savory yellow, add a spirited tang to this fall's fashion color parade, says the September issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl.

Chutney, one of your best color accessories, will set off a range of brighter color accents in your autumn wardrobe. Try mixing a lemon-phosphate sweater with the blandness of a chutney skirt.

Add a blouse and hat in the startlingly light color of blue rock-candy to highlight a chutney suit. Deck a boat-necked chutney jumper with a high-necked licorice blouse.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Former Business Woman, Lately Married, Now Tackling Housework for the First Time, Sends Out SOS; She Is Tired, Bedraggled, Confused

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For 20 years I worked as secretary to an executive in a large firm, where I had an assistant. I made a good salary, which I really earned. In those years I did no housework. I wasn't expected to lift a dish off the table, or to do my own laundry—much less "do" for anyone else.

Then I got married a few months ago, had a nice long honeymoon, which is over now, and I am living in a four-room apartment, to which my husband returns for daily lunch. He is very kind to me and has employed a girl to come in twice a week to help keep this doll-house clean—but even so, the work defeats me.

Never having done housework before, I find everything most difficult, and I am always tired. I have lost 10 pounds, not so much from the work as from the lost motion I go through, and the mental strain of knowing I'm not doing the job as I should. And I don't have time to take care of myself—to bathe, primp, set my hair, do my nails, etc., as I used to.

She Hates to Fill Any Job so Poorly

HERE is a typical day: I arise, fix breakfast, do the dishes, make the bed; wash out some socks for my husband, some nylons for me; and then, I'm ashamed to admit, it's almost 11:30, time to start lunch. After lunch, when Bob leaves, I do those dishes, and then I have to get ready to go shopping. When I get home it's time to start dinner, which I fix with the aid of a couple of cookbooks, one pressure cooker and one ordinary cooker,—and altogether I'm in a dither.

I hate to fill a job as poorly as I'm filling this one; and I have asked several friends to outline for me a little program of what-to-do daily; but they all say I have to work that out for myself. So can you suggest any books I might read, that would give me the know-how of running a home in a manner to please a man—a widower at that, who had a wonderful efficient first wife whom he adored. G. C.

There Is Humor in the Situation

DEAR G. C.: There is humor in the situation; and I daresay many a seasoned homemaker, accustomed to carrying her multiple burdens with casual expertness, while thinking of herself as a "dumb bunny" compared to career women, is going to get a big laugh out of your punchdrunk efforts to clean and cook on schedule.

But congratulations on your humility and directness. I like your spirit in admitting there's more to homemaking than met your eye in years past. A less honest, less flexible woman, fresh from success in the business world, who found herself floored by minimum housework, might have turned sour on the job, claiming it wasn't worthy of her streamlined talents; and I'm glad you don't deal in subterfuge.

Also I'm glad you've hit on the idea of textbook guidance, for Mary Davis Gillies, specialist in home-beautification, has written a dandy manual, "How to Keep House" (Harper & Brothers), that covers everything, in 274 pages, with index. And it is right up to the minute, just published this year.

Source of Guidance for Green Homemaker

ONE-TIME instructor in household arts at the University of Oregon, later with the Federal Bureau of Home Economics in Washington, D. C., and for the last 12 years "better homes" editor with a national magazine, Mrs. Gillies is pastmistress in the skills of homemaking—as any woman who has ever been harnessed to the kitchen sink will realize, after reading her book.

She writes with genuine affection and firsthand knowledge about how to run a home, how to keep it clean, how to "tool up" for efficiency; how to plan and use a kitchen; how to market, and when and what to buy for the larder; how to wash and iron clothes; how to entertain, what to feed unexpected guests, etc.,—anything at all the novice needs to know.

If I sound enthusiastic about Mrs. Gillies' manual, believe me, I am. Just this last hour, after fetching it out for a second study, to make sure it's the book for you, I got so entranced with favorite chapters that I could hardly put it down and finish these advices. So read Mrs. Gillies—and good luck to you. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

TOBÉ SAYS—

Casual Coat Is a "Must"

It's been so long since real casual coats were in fashion that I think every women is ready for one. For a casual coat is probably the most useful coat you can have. Certainly if you live in the suburbs, or in a smallish city, or in the country, it's a "must."

I can't begin to tell you how smart casual coats look this year in tweeds and fleeces and camel's hair.

Casual coats must be roomy and comfortable, either boxy or flared. But more often than not they are worn with a belt that gives one the new fitted coat look.

Glitter-Happy Reporter Drools Over Diamond, Ruby Doo-Dad

By Ed Creagh

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 18.—If you really can't decide what to get me for Christmas, there's a little doo-dad on display over at the Waldorf-Astoria that would suit me like chestnut dressing suits roast turkey.

Not that I'm hinting, mind you. As a matter of fact I'm not sure what I'm doing. I've just come back from that 35-million-dollar jewel show at the Waldorf and frankly, friend, I'm glitter-happy.

The American National Retail Jewelers, whose baby it is, says its the biggest display of precious stones and baubles ever held. Acres of diamonds. Bushels of rubies. Pearls by the peck.

In one word: Golly!

Anyhow, there I was, holding a cigarette and wishing I had a match, when a big, happy-looking fellow held out a tricky little gadget, touched a button and presto! There was flame.

"Thanks," I said, lighting up. "That's quite a lighter."

"You like it?" said the man, Carl Begemann of the American Safety Razor Corp. "Well, sir, you can have this lighter—"

"Gosh, thanks. But——"

"——for $5000," continued Begemann, looking even happier.

"Of course," Begemann said, "this tray and that little urn go with it. All 14-carat gold. There are 36 diamonds and 24 rubies in the set. Just right for a Christmas stocking, wouldn't you say?"

This last remark was not aimed at me, but at another gawker, who at least looked as if he might have money, so I drifted away, puffing gingerly at the cigarette which had just had a $5000 light. It tasted like any other cigarette.

Then who should come along but a well-proportioned, brown-eyed blonde named Roma Paige, all decked out in a white nylon bathing suit with pearls dripping from every thread.

"Don't I look expensive?" she asked brightly. "You're supposed to guess how many pearls I'm wearing. If you guess right you win a magnum of champagne."

I guessed 2315, but that couldn't have been right, because a woman's handbag I examined a few minutes later turned out to be covered by 14,000 pearls, and Miss Paige's swim suit was much larger than the handbag.

"Actually," whispered Miss Theresa Jacobson, who was guarding the handbag, "there are only 13,990 pearls. Somebody dropped it and one pearl fell off.

"But, there are 20 carats of diamonds and 30 carats of rubies

"Gosh," I said. "And the—ah—price?"

Miss J. looked elaborately casual. "Twenty thousand dollars," she said. "It's the most expensive handbag in the world. We've sold three just like it—one each in Memphis, Miami and Los Angeles."

That did it.

If a woman can pay 20 perfectly good G's for a pearly old handbag that she'll probably leave behind in the movies someday, who says a $5000 lighter set is too good for uncle?

So as we were saying about that Christmas remembrance—

But don't let me know you're ordering it, will you? I want it to be a surprise.

About Cooking Utensils, Restoring Luste r to Screens

We are to move soon into a new apartment with very little storage space in the kitchen. In order to save valuable cupboard room, I would like to hang my copper-bottomed cooking utensils on one wall. But the handles are not equipped with rings and wherein lies my problem. Could you tell me where I might have holes drilled in the handles, or how I could secure replacements supplied with rings? The set was purchased in the Navy Ship Service and has no brand name. Also, since the pans will always be on display, could you give me the name of a new powder specifically made for scouring copper?

E. O. B.

A firm which does metal repair work is able to drill the holes if the handles are made of one piece of heavy metal. To contact one firm doing this work, call Metropolitan 1134 and ask for the metal repair department.

The polish you have in mind is possibly the one put out by a firm making a well-known brand of copper-bottomed utensils and is sold in houseware departments where that make of kitchen equipment is stocked.

In painting a new, unfinished screen door, I smudged some of the white paint on the copper screen. Immediately I attempted to remove the paint with turpentine, which proved unsuccessful. Only part of the paint was removed and the screen, which formerly was a bright copper, is now lusterless, dark and even in some places black. Have you any suggestion for removing the paint and also restoring the luster to the screen?

C. T. H.

You should be able to remove the white paint by brushing the screen with a steel brush which has been wetted with benzine. When all the paint has been removed, rubbing the discolored parts of the screen with a good metal polish may remove the discoloration enough to make the stains less obvious. If it does, you could then give the screen a coat of good quality spar varnish thinned with an equal amount of a half-and-half mixture of linseed oil and turpentine to portect it against tarnish. Or, instead of the varnish, you can buy at a paint store a clear varnish vehicle to apply to the screen for tarnish protection.

If it is not possible to remove the paint and the stain completely or if you do not wish to go to the trouble of it, you could paint the screen with a black screenenamel which will cover both nicely.

PETUNIA!

How bitter my cup!
For HOURS I'm sprinkling
And rolling things up!

Why didn't you sprinkle 'em on the clothesline, Petunia? Use the fine spray on your hose—then just roll up the clothes as you take them down.

HUMPTY-DUMPTY SPECIAL: These tempting eggs were stuffed whole. First, a sliver was sliced from the top, then the edge was cut in points, and the yolk forced out. Mixed with salt, pepper, scraped union, chopped bacon and mayonnaise, the mashed yolk was returned to the egg case. For variety, chopped olive or chopped parsley could be used instead of bacon

Directions—From Start to Delicious Finish

Never Say Again: 'I Can't Boil an Egg'

By Lucia Brown

STUFFED EGGS—those time-honored tidbits of the picnic basket—give almost any summer meal a lift, be it a salad plate luncheon or a buffet supper.

They can be made in infinite variety, so stuffing them gives you a real chance to exercise your imagination. First, though, the eggs must be carefully cooked.

It's no compliment to call a person hard-boiled, and no compliment for an egg, either. The best eggs these days are "hard-cooked." Never let them strike a boil while they're cooking. Just let 'em simmer, and they'll be tender as a mother's tear. Fast cooking is what toughens them up.

Started in hot water, you'll find that average-sized eggs already at room temperature will take 15 to 20 minutes of simmering to cook hard. For extra large or very cold eggs, allow 2 to 4 minutes longer.

Immediately after cooking, put them under cold water for quick chilling. This makes shells easier to remove and prevents further cooking. Crack the eggs by tapping against a hard surface or with a spoon. To loosen the shell, roll the egg between the hands. Begin peeling at the large end. Hold eggs under running cold water or dip them in water to ease off shells.

Now for the stuffing. Here are a few suggestions:

EGGS STUFFED WITH CRAB MEAT

6 hard-cooked eggs
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup flaked crab meat
1 cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
¾ cup mayonnaise
Paprika

Cut eggs in half crosswise. Remove yolks, mash and mix with remaining ingredients. Fill whites, round over top, sprinkle with paprika.

CHEESE DEVILED EGGS

4 hard-cooked eggs
2 tablespoons grated sharp cheese
¼ teaspoon mustard
Salt and cayenne
1 teaspoon vinegar
1 tablespoon butter, melted
Milk

CUT EGGS into halves lengthwise. Remove yolks, mash or force through seive. Add other ingredients, including enough milk to moisten. Fill egg whites. Put halves together or arrange them cut side up on plate. Wrap or cover with wax paper and chill well before serving.

SALAD EGGS

6 hard-cooked eggs
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon cream
½ teaspoon mustard
Dash cayenne
1 tablespoon anchovy paste

CUT HARD-COOKED EGGS in half. Remove yolks and mix to a paste with butter, cream, mustard, cayenne, salt and anchovy paste. Fill egg whites and place eggs in nest of lettuce or watercress. Garnish with radishes and small onions. Serves 4 to 6 persons.

Curdled Custard

A curdled custard may be rubbed through a fine sieve and cooked up again. There will be a loss in quantity but that is better than a total loss. Before you do anything, however, try beating it very hard.

Serve Them Often While Season Lasts

Peaches Are Popular and Plentiful

By Anne Pappas

PEACHES are popular this month. There are lots of them, and they are unusually luscious in color and texture. You will want to serve them often before their season wanes. They are delicious served with clotted cream, or as we suggest here in a summer fritter as Austrian hostesses do, in a French-style tart—and our own "Alaska" with peaches the hidden surprise.

AUSTRIAN PEACH FRITTERS

4 peaches, peeled and diced
½ cup white wine
½ cup sugar
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
3 eggs, slightly beaten
½ cup milk
Butter or margarine
Confectioners' sugar
Cinnamon

SOAK PEACHES in wine and sugar 30 minutes. Sift together flour and salt. Combine eggs and milk and stir into flour. Beat until smooth. Drain and add peaches. Drop by spoonfuls into shallow layer of hot butter. Brown on both sides. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar and cinnamon. Approximate yield: Four portions.

PEACH ALASKA

Place four 3-inch rounds of sponge cake on several thicknesses of heavy paper on baking sheet. Lay a peach half on each piece, cut side up. Sprinkle each half with 1 teaspoon rum. Top with a large spoonful of vanilla or peach ice cream. Beat 3 egg whites with a pinch of salt until stiff; gradually beat in 3 tablespoons sugar and continue beating until meringue is very stiff. Spread over entire surface of ice cream, peach and cake. Sprinkle surface with 3 tablespoons sugar and bake in hot oven (400 degree F.) about 5 minutes, or until lightly browned. Yield: Four portions.

SUMMER DESSERT—Baked peach tart

PEACH TART

1½ cups all-purpose flour
¼ cup sugar.
Pinch of salt
6 tablespoons cold butter
4 egg yolks
1 tablespoon cold water
4 cups sliced peeled peaches
2 teaspoons lemon juice
½ cup sugar
2½ tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
Pinch of nutmeg
½ teaspoon almond extract

SIFT FLOUR onto board. Make a well in center and add sugar, salt, butter, egg yolk and water. Mix center ingredients with fingers to a smooth paste; quickly work in flour with heel of hand until thoroughly combined. Chill. Roll out on well-floured board to fit an 8-inch round or square flan ring. Place ring on cookie sheet. Line ring with pastry and trim off edges. Sprinkle peaches with lemon juice. Combine and add sugar, flour, salt, nutmeg and extract. Fill pastry with fruit mixture. Bake in hot oven (425 degree F.) 10 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate (350 degree F.) and bake about 30 minutes. Garnish with whipped cream. Or serve with ice cream. Approximate yield: One 8-inch tart or six portions.

Cooking Cues . . .

Thin slivers of almonds, browned in butter or margarine, are delicious served over panned fish or a green vegetable such as snap beans, broccoli, or peas.

To blanch almonds put them in boiling water until their skins loosen; slip off the skins with your fingers, dry the almonds, slice lengthwise into thin slivers. Melt a few tablespoons of butter or margarine in a skillet, add the almond strips, and brown them slowly, stirring frequently.

Season a flaked white fish or crab meat salad with horseradish for a zesty flavor, and serve with tomato aspic and salad greens. Apple dumplings, made from new green apples, are a good ending for this fish salad plate.

A left-over egg white may be used in a chilled coffee drink. To make it mix two tablespoons of sugar with two teaspoons of instant soluble coffee and a cup and a half of ice-cold milk. Beat the egg white until it is stiff enough to stand in peaks that tip over slightly when the beater is slowly withdrawn, then mix the beaten white with the coffee-milk. This will serve two.

For an extra-special sandwich filling mix cream cheese, deviled ham, and finely ground pimento-stuffed olives. This filling may also be used with Parkerhouse rolls, and servd with a luncheon salad.

Parboil green peppers after cutting off the tops and removing the inner seeds and membrane; cut in half lengthwise, fill halves with a mixture of creamed ham and cooked macaroni. Top with buttered soft bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven for about half an hour.

Orange Juice A Vital Part Of Baby Diet

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It isn't unusual for a mother to write me, "My baby doesn't like orange juice (or can't take it) so I just stopped giving it to her." This shows a lack of understanding of the vital part orange juice plays in the diet of a growing child.

In the days when almost every baby was breast fed, orange juice was not a vital food, for breast milk is a "live" food and provides the essential food elements. Babies, who take breast milk, can get along without orange juice, today as then, but it is a pleasant food and it is well to get a baby used to its tart taste in the event that he is put on cows' milk.

Cows' milk, when freshly milked, has plenty of vitamin C. But babies don't get cows' milk freshly milked. They get it after some days are past and it has gone through processing to preserve it and make it safe to drink. So, for them, orange juice provides those elements which are diminished by time, boiling, drying, homogenization or pasteurization.

The lack of vitamin C causes scurvy and we see so little of it that it is obvious most children get enough of it in their daily food and fresh fruit juices. Once, in a clinic, I saw a baby with a fairly well developed case of scurvy. It had spongy, purplish gums, which receded from the teeth; it would not stand on its feet, it was pale and "soggy" looking.

For only three weeks, after an illness, it had been deprived of all but cooked food, chiefly macaroni. Macaroni is a good food but not for a whole diet, and minus all fresh foods. In that short a time the child had noticeable scurvy.

Cure for Ancient Ailment

Fresh juices and fresh, uncooked foods are still the cure for this ancient ailment. Orange juice because it is palatable and available all the year round, as well as rich in vitamin C. If the baby cannot take orange juice, and some cannot, tomato, carrot or cabbage juice (raw); sauerkraut or pineapple juice are all substitutes. Ascorbic acid in fluid or tablet form can be added to the formula or given mixed with water and can substitute for any of the above.

Begin all juices in teaspoonful portions and increase slowly until the baby can take two to three ounces a day of the citrus fruit juices, double this amount of tomato juice. They may be diluted with water when baby is small and this may be omitted as he gets used to this new food.

Market Memo

Enjoy Peaches and Onions While They Are Best Buys

THE sharp, nippy onion and the sweet, mild peach are named as outstanding vegetable and fruit buys of the week here by the Department of Agriculture.

ONIONS are reaching the local market by the carload from places as far apart as Colorado, Michigan, Washington State and New York. Why not make some of them into pepper-onion relish?

Start with a 1-quart finely chopped onion, 2 cups finely chopped sweet red pepper, 2 cups finely chopped green pepper, 1 cup sugar, 1 quart vinegar and 4 teaspoons salt. Combine all and bring slowly to a boil. Cook until slightly thickened, then pour into clean, hot sterilized jars. Fill to top and seal tightly with sterilized lids.

APPLES AND PLUMS are also excellent fruit buys locally. Top buys among vegetables include snap and lima beans, corn, peppers, potatoes, tomatoes, and onions. Cantaloupes lead in the melon department.

LAMBS TALE: It looks as though lamb chops are going to be scarce for at least another year or two. Uncle Sam has counted his lamb crop for 1949 and prospects aren't so good. It's the smallest since they started taking a mid-summer count back in 1924.

Make 'Refresher Course' a Mid-day Meal Must

DON'T MAKE the mistake of cutting down on food too much during hot August days. You'll be surprised at how much an attractive lunch will pick you up when a torrid morning's got you down. For a put-together-in-a-minute noon meal, serve Frosty Tomato Bouillon (made from canned soups), toasted roll hamburgers, crisp fresh celery, carrot strips, radish roses, and iced tea. Here's the recipe for the Frosty Tomato Bouillon:

FROSTY TOMATO BOUILLON

INGREDIENTS: 1 10½-ounce can condensed tomato soup, 1 10½-ounce can condensed bouillon, 2 cans cold water (use soup can as a measure), ¼ cup grated cucumber, onion rings, pimento-stuffed olives.

METHOD: Chill the cans of soup in the refrigerator, if possible, before making the soup. Then mix the tomato soup, boullon, water, and grated cucumber together well. Chill thoroughly. Garnish with onion rings and olive slices just before serving. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Husbands Say in Survey

'Women's Work Is Not All Done by Women'

JUST HOW MUCH the average man does around the house to ease the little lady's toil and troubles always has been an intriguing, if not a debatable, question. And one on which it's doubtful that any two people will agree.

But to get the latest information from the male side, The American Magazine recently polled a cross-section of its men readers who generally are in the middle-income class. Sixty-two per cent of the 2350 respondents are in the 25-45-age group and have children and nearly 90 per cent live in communities with 2500 or more population.

Whether they were being boastful or not, a good percentage of the men stated that they cook, wash dishes, scrub and wax floors, sweep rugs, wash windows, and shop for food.

To start with, 16.5 per cent reported they always prepare their own breakfast while 53 per cent said they did it sometimes. Only three out of 10, 30.5 per cent, conceded their wives prepared it regularly. And just to show the trend, 29.1 per cent of the men said they prepare breakfast more often now than they did five years ago. More than one third, 37 per cent, even cook cereal for breakfast.

In fact, 38.7 per cent of The American Magazine's male readers profess to be right at home on the kitchen range, turning out such things as cornbread, date nut bread, stews, welsh rarebit, spaghetti, macaroni, and omelettes, not to mention their ability to broil steaks and chops or bake pies, biscuits, brownies, and donuts.

When it comes to dishwashing, more than eight out of 10, 84.8 per cent, have given it a fling and 65.7 per cent claim to have been complimented by the better-half on the wonderful cleanup job they've done.

Window-washing is the task of 35.7 per cent of the men, compared with 37.8 per cent who say their wives do it. An even larger number, 42.8 per cent of the men scrub floors; 45.7 per cent wax floors; and 53.1 per cent sweep rugs.

As for buying food, 54.3 per cent said they could take it or leave it, but an appreciable number, 17.5 per cent, actually enjoy this type of shopping.

And although 95 per cent admit to buying things not on the better-half's list, 51.5 per cent claim their wives think they do "just right" in the matter of food purchases. Only 40 per cent admit that the wives claim they buy too much.

Helpful Tips for the Busy Housewife

One good way to help keep your kitchen counters clean and tidy when you are preparing a meal is to have a small tray handy on which you can put your stirring spoon, measuring spoons, two-tined fork, and so forth.

An excellent variation for plain muffins is to roll the tops in sugar and cinnamon that have been well mixed together as soon as you take them out of the oven.

Cooked beets, either slices or cut in strips, may be dressed with a sauce of sour cream flavored with a little sugar and prepared mustard, and seasoned with salt and freshly ground pepper.

Diced cooked carrots and white turnips may be served together in a cream sauce; a small amount of cooked peas (leftover) may also be added for color.

Cook cauliflowerets in boiling salted water until partly tender. Then dip in seasoned flour, egg, and bread crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Best News Story Since "Man Bites Dog"

David Kandel of 1311 H st. nw. was at 13th and F sts. nw. the other day when he saw an incident that should certainly be preserved for posterity.

A very small Boy Scout lugging two very large suitcases and a knapsack came puffing up to the curb to wait for the traffic light to change.

When it did, the Boy Scout reached for his suitcases—but not in time. A kindly old lady with a twinkle in her eye grabbed the suitcases, and without a word carried them across the street for the lad.

BETTER WAIT A WHILE, TOMMY—THE HEAT'S ON

R. W. Thompson of Bethesda, Md., reports a stroke of good fortune which bids fair to set him up in a lucrative business. He says:

"Yesterday, my bird dog, Don, whose pen is on the edge of the Columbia Country Club golf course, was actually spoken to by the Secretary of Labor, Maurice Tobin, as that distinguished gentleman walked past.

"My neighbors, all of whose dogs were barking just as furiously as Don at Mr. Tobin, are green with envy.

"My problem is this: With such a fine 'in,' don't you think I ought to hang out my shingle as a 5 percenter?"

UNSAFE POOL?

A reader who learned that the Takoma swimming pool was drained and cleaned only once a season was aghast. "Doesn't this call for an investigation?" she asked.

So I investigated — and found everything in apple pie order.

The Takoma pool, like most of Washington's modern pools, uses the "circulation system." Filtered and chlorinated water is constantly added to the tank, and the bottom is periodically cleaned by a suction method similar to a household vacuum cleaner.

The water is sampled every two hours, and bacteriological tests are made weekly, according to Robert Rizi of the District Health Department.

A few local pools use the "fill and draw" system, and these are emptied each day; but they're not considered as modern as the "circulation" type.

Incidentally, there's also ample reassurance of sanitary conditions for those who use Glen Echo's pool. The Maryland Board of Health inspects it at least once a week, plus irregular "surprise" checks. And a consulting engineer is employed to test samples of the water four times each day.

So, while it may seem strange that our pools do not require more frequent drainings and scrubbings, it appears that more than adequate precautions are taken to keep them safe and sanitary.

UGH! FIREWATER

Televiewers and radio listeners are familiar with Sportscaster Bob Wolff's facile tongue and easy manner. But even Bob gets thrown for a loss on occasion.

Wednesday night, he was interviewing Cecilia Blevins on WTTG. Cecilia is a lady wrestler, and a full-blooded Indian.

As is the custom on the program, a waiter brought around a couple of bottles of Valley Forge Beer during the interview, and Bob suggested that Cecilia join him in a few sips of The Product.

Ordinarily, the guest is glad to wet his lips and go along with the commercial, but Bob bit the dust when his Redskin lass replied:

"Oh, you mustn't offer me beer because there's a $500 fine and a five-year prison sentence for supplying an Indian with alcoholic beverages."

Cecilia wasn't kidding. Congress was recently asked to change the law, and permit Indians to have the same drinking privileges as palefaces, but the House defeated the proposed change. Now Wolff quips:

"If I were a lawyer, I'd have known about that law. Lawyers have to pass a 'bar exam'."

Cancer Cure Rated First As Needed Discovery

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

U. S. Stands High in Middle East

(While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round will be written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

By Robert S. Allen

A high United States official, just returned from a tour of the Middle East reports one outstanding impression:

Wiley

That, amid the welter of assassination, intrigue and autocratic rule in this ancient cockpit, the prestige and power of the United States stand out like a beacon.

The official related the following episode to prove his point.

After his attempted slaying some months ago, the Shah of Iran imposed martial rule. The Iranian press, particularly, felt the weight of the Shah's fury. Seventeen liberal, non-Communist newspapers were suppressed, and their editors thrown into jail. The Shah ordered them tried on charges of subversive activities.

To support these accusations, articles dating back as far as 20 years were brought into court. Despite these extreme measures, only six were convicted.

United States Ambassador in Iran is John Wiley. An able, tough-minded career man, he has been an outstanding success in his delicate and arduous post. A firm believer in democracy and freedom of the press, Wiley, privately, was shocked by the autocratic persecution of the editors. But because it was a strictly internal affair, he kept hands off until the six editors were sentenced.

Several days later, Wiley sent each of them a small package. It consisted of one pack of American cigarettes—with Wiley's personal card.

Nothing was written on the card. Also, there was no secrecy about Wiley's action. His chauffeur delivered the packages to the prison warden to give to the editors. That was all there was to it.

The following day, the editors were pardoned.

Note—Because of Wiley's penetrating reports to the State Department, the Iranian Ambassador in Washington is very hostile toward him, has repeatedly tried to undermine Wiley.

No Loss

A British correspondent telephoned Senator Kenneth Wherry (Nebr.), Republican floor leader, for an interview on the forthcoming International Monetary Conference.

"All I can say," remarked Wherry, "is that Sir Stafford Cripps is obviously coming here to promote a new loan. He wouldn't be interrupting his rest cure in Switzerland for any other reason."

The British newsman protested this view.

"Well," observed Wherry, "if he's coming over to lend us some money, I'll be glad to see him."

"Can I quote you on that?"

"Certainly," replied Wherry. Then turning to a friend, he added, "I was safe in letting him quote me. I can't lose any votes in England."

Deadlock

Illustrative of the snafued state of congressional business is an unpublicized but long-standing deadlock between the House and Senate over the Army civil functions bill.

This stalemate has existed since June 1, with no sign of a break in sight.

Cause of the deadlock is a 590 million dollars rivers and harbors rider that the Senate wrote into the measure. This huge local gravy grab was not included in the President's budget. The fund would be spent by the Army Engineers. They have one of the most potent undercover lobbies in Washington.

The House conferees, led by Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), have refused to budge on the issue. Cannon has served notice he will block the bill as long as it contains the rider.

Militant backers of the rider are Senators John McClellan (D., Ark.), Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), and Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.). McClennan is head of the Rivers and Harbors Congress, an Army Engineers lobby, and all three of the Senators are loud "economy" talkers.

Klan Chief Loses Plea to Get Out of Birmingham Jail

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 18 (AP).—The State Supreme Court today turned down a new appeal by Alabama Klan Chief William Hugh Morris for release from jail.

The court voted 5-0. An earlier appeal was refused by a 4-2 vote.

Morris, Birmingham roofing contractor, has served 32 days under a contempt citation for failure to produce records for a grand jury investigation at Birmingham.

The court today announced it also overruled a petition seeking a rehearing of the first plea last month. The State argued there was nothing for the court to review.
